BONDS HELD UP

ACTION BY CITY TREASURER FOLLOWS LOAN INDICTMENTS

Politicians in Panic Over the Bills Returned Against Street Superintendent Doyle and Councilman Hatton in Connection With Passage of Bill by the City Council.

Following the indictment of Superintendent of Streets James H. Doyle and Councilman James A. Hatton of Ward 4, Charlestown, by the Grand Jury which under District Attorney John B. Moran investigated the passage of the $1,599,500 city loan bill by the Common Council on July 8, City Treasurer Charles H. Slattery announced to-day that he will hold up the sale of the $3,924,000 issue of city bonds which was authorized by the city council

These bonds include the item of $1,100,000 for various municipal purposes and one of $400,000 for street improvements which were provided for in the loan bill, which resulted in the indictment of Mr. Doyle for attempted bribery and of Councilman Hatton for perjury.

City Treasurer Slattery and Mayor Fitzgerald fear now that the loan bill may be declared illegal, and the City Treasurer said this morning that the bonds will not be offered for sale until the city law department has given an opinion as to the legality of the loan bill which has caused all the trouble.

Billings to Aid Moran.

A startling development in the loan bill bribery indictments which has caused a panic among the politicians of the Fitzgerald administration this morning was a secret conference between Edmund C. Billings, head of the Good Government Association, and District Attorney John B. Moran in the latter's office in the court house.

Mr. Billings and the District Attorney were together for fifty-five minutes, and when they parted neither would say a word to reporters.

Mr. Billings, as he hurried from the District Attorney's office, wore an air of mystery, and when a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter asked him about the purpose of his visit to the District Attorney he simply smiled.

"Did you go there in connection with the loan bill bribery investigation, Mr. Billings?" asked the reporter.

The answer was a smile and a shrug of the shoulders.

"Not a word to say," was the District Attorney's replies to all questions.

Conference Scares City Hall.

The conference between Mr. Billings and Mr. Moran has scared the City Hall politicians even more than the indictment of Superintendent of Streets Doyle and Councilman Hatton.

The Good Government Association opposed the borrowing by the city of $400,000 for street improvements and it is said that Mr. Billings this morning furnished the District Attorney with some evidences of graft which will implicate several more prominent members of the Fitzgerald administration.

It was after the visit of Mr. Billings to the District Attorney's office that City Treasurer Slattery decided that the loan bill may be illegal.

Mr. Billings is said to be convinced that the loan bill will be shown to be illegal and it is said that he urged the District Attorney to take further action which will make it impossible for the city to borrow a cent to be used in Superintendent of Streets Doyle's department.

Mayor Fitzgerald went to Old Orchard last right to remain a week, but all day he has been in telephonic communication with City Hall.

To Wage War on Moran.

Early this morning Superintendent Doyle appeared at his office in City Hall and declared that he is going to fight District Attorney Moran to a finish when he seeks re-election to his present office.

A close friend of the Mayor, who is an official at City Hall, says that the Mayor will also join in the battle against Moran, and that to defeat him he will use the entire city political machine.

"Moran's indictment of Doyle," declared this man, "and his attitude towards the city administration, means that Mayor Fitzgerald and the city machine will make an open fight against the District Attorney. The Mayor had intended to remain neutral, but Moran has forced him to take the other course, and he will defeat Moran."

Mr. Billings went to the District Attorney's office early this morning and immediately went into conference with him in his private office.

Mr. Billings would not tell the object of his visit to the District Attorney, and Mr. Moran would not answer the questions of reporters.

Mr. Billings has been active in showing up the methods of the present city administration and has frequently declared publicly that it does not serve the interests of the city.

Expect New Sensations.

The Good Government Association, of which Mr. Billings is the head, exposed the grafting by city administration politicians in the Fenway contracts and has made numerous specific charges of bribery and corruption.

The Good Government Association has the records of every member of the Fitzgerald administration, including that of the Mayor himself.

It is said that some facts have been unearthed by the agents of the Good Government Association which will create even more excitement than the indictment of Doyle and Hatton when they are publicly uncovered.

The Good Government Association has in the past made the claim that no city contract is given without the knowledge and consent of Mayor Fitzgerald.

Panic at City Hall.

Democrats close to Mayor Fitzgerald openly declare this morning that the indictment of his former campaign manager

STOCKS OFF AT OPENING; SLIGHT RALLY

Heavy Slump Followed by Reaction, but the Trading Is Feverish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Another bear raid at the opening of the market to-day caused a drop in prices of from one to seven points. The entire stock list broke under the lead of Smelting and Refining. The railroad shares were raided, particularly the Pacifics, and the industrials sagged with the rest of the market.

Shortly before noon the covering of short sales brought a slight rally, but noon quotations showed that the market had suffered heavy net losses all around.

Trading Very Irregular.

Smelting declined four points at the opening and the railroad stocks dropped from one to two points. Amalgamated dropped 3¼, then still another point. Steel Common fell 1½, but rallied later on a sale of 5,000 shares.

In twenty minutes after the opening Amalgamated had recovered three points from low point, and in five minutes more the trading became very active, but extremely irregular. Illinois Central was a marked exception to the general list, rising 2¼ at the opening.

Consolidated Gas opened three points lower, and then declined to par.

The first price recorded on the tape showed a decline of four points in Smelting. St. Paul opened 1½ lower; Reading 1⅜; Air Brake 1⅞; Northern Pacific 2⅜ in all; Anaconda 1½; New York Central 1⅛; Atchison 1⅛; Great Northern 1½; Canadian Pacific 1½; and Erie ¾.

Losses All Around.

By the end of five minutes' trading Great Northern preferred had dropped two points. Union Pacific opened five minutes later on 1,000 shares, 2¼ lower. Pennsylvania declined only ⅛. Amalgamated opened on 2,600 shares at 66, a decline of 3¼. It sold on 1,000 shares at 67 and sold off to 65, rallying again to 66; at the low point it was off 4¼.

At the end of ten minutes' trading Smelting rallied 2 points. Steel Common, which opened on 5,000 shares at 29⅜, a decline of ⅜, fell ½ further and rallied to the opening figure. Sugar opened 2½ lower and rallied ½. New York Central, which opened at 100, declined to 99½ and rallied one point. Reading, after a net loss of 2⅜, rallied ¾. Union Pacific declined in all 2⅝, and rallied 2. Baltimore & Ohio declined 2¼ and rallied ¼. St. Paul recovered about 2 per cent., rising a slight fraction above yesterday's final. Southern Pacific opened off 1¾ and rallied a point. Canadian Pacific lost in all 2 points. Northern Pacific lost 2¾ and rallied 1⅜.

Boston Telegraphers Cheered by Reports

STRIKERS WIN RECRUITS

Appeal to Typographical Convention to Put Ban on Non-Union Copy.

President McGarty of Local Body Confident of Union Victory.

With prospects of victory brightening and a firmer determination to fight the issues to a finish, many of the striking telegraph operators of Boston met to-day at their headquarters at No. 694 Washington street and discussed the situation.

One of the matters that was considered was the force of operators who have taken the places of those who quit their keys. Many of these strike-breakers are women. Some of them are girl students, others former employes who were unable to keep the pace under ordinary conditions, and one a woman seventy-four years of age. The striking operators say that it will be impossible for the companies to give satisfactory service with a force of this caliber.

President James J. McGarty of the Boston union made this statement to-day:

LOCAL CHIEF CONFIDENT.

"You may say that the men are more determined to fight this battle to a finish and the prospects are brighter for complete victory than at any time since the commencement of the trouble.

"We have received reports that the Western Union operators are out in Portland, Me., together with the chief operator.

"It was reported early to-day by an Associated Press operator at Providence that he had gone out. Word was also received that the Associated Press men at Worcester had struck.

"In addition to having the local Typographical Union take action on the matter of newspaper compositors handling copy furnished by non-union telegraph operators, we are going to communicate with the convention of the International Typographical Union at Hot Springs, Ark., to have that body act.

"The operators fo rthe first time in years are enjoying a brief vacation, something which both companies have absolutely refused to grant."

In the Chamber of Commerce, where ordinarily there are eighteen telegraph operators employed—twelve Western Union and six Postal—there was only one man at his key to-day.

A committee from the Boston Commercial Telegraphers' Union, headed by President James J. McGarty, called at the headquarters of the Typographical Union on Federal street at noon in regard to the vote of the striking telegraphers that newspaper compositors be prohibited from handling any telegraph messages received by non-union telegraphers.

After a conference with Secretary Thomas P. Curtin, it was decided to request the convention of the International Typographical Union, now in session at Hot Springs, Ark., to act on the matter.

The clash between the companies and their men, it is believed, has only reached the skirmish stage. The real battle will begin when the general strike order comes from Chicago. It was expected that that order would have been issued yesterday, but President S. J. Small failed to reach there and action was delayed until his arrival.

Small arrives at Chicago to-day. He will confer with other national officers of the telegraphers' union and the lines of battle will be laid out.

MAY INVOLVE OTHERS.

It is believed that the Order of Railway Telegraphers will be called upon to take a hand in the fight because the railroad officials say they will insist on the operators sending commercial messages.

It is possible that the typographical unions of the country may be brought into the trouble by their refusal to handle any matter sent by strike-breaking operators.

While government officials are seriously handicapped in carrying on the business of the country, and business interests are seriously menaced, President Roosevelt has practically said that he will allow

CRISIS COMES TO-DAY IN GREAT EDDY SUIT

ATTEMPTS MADE TO OPEN EVERY PAGE OF VENERABLE LEADER'S LIFE.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 15.—This is the crucial day in the now famous equity suit of Eddy against Calvin A. Frye and others, in which the "next friends," through their attorneys, are fighting with all their power to have the three masters, Judge Edgar Aldrich, Attorney Hosea Parker and Dr. George F. Jelly, open every page of Mrs. Eddy's life at least so far as her connection with Christian Science is concerned.

Fighting for the "next friends" before the masters is Attorney DeWitt C. Howe, and opposing him at every step is General Frank S. Streeter, who appears for Mrs. Eddy's Christian Science leaders who are attacked in the suit.

Howe Arguing To-day.

All the morning Attorney Howe was arguing the question of whether the next friends shall be allowed to introduce testimony covering Mrs. Eddy's religious views as far back as 1866.

Attorney Howe frankly told the masters that this is the most important question both from the standpoint of Christian Scientists and the next friends that has come up so far. If the "next friends" cannot succeed in getting Mrs. Eddy's religious views into the case they practically lose the only standing they have in court. The Christian Scientists are just as energetically fighting to have the masters exclude all this testimony.

"Mrs. Eddy is suffering from general insanity, a diseased condition of mind which affects every act of her life," declared Attorney Hoe Howe.

"It affects her relations with her son, George W. Glover, and her granddaughter, Mary Glover. It affects her relations with them as it did her relations with Richard Kennedy.

"Richard Kennedy was at one time one of her pupils, and was associated with her in the practice of Christian Science healing, and in the publication of "Science and Health."

"Imagined Him a Demon."

"Becoming estranged from him she imagined him to be a demon, and declared that he was attempting to assassinate her by administering mental poison.

"She even went so far as to declare that her husband died from the affects of arsenical poison mentally administered by Kennedy.

"If she believed this as to Richard Ken-

FIREMEN FREE BOY CAUGHT IN ELEVATOR WELL

Lad Was Imprisoned Between the Car and the Brick Wall.

Jammed between an elevator car and a brick wall, William Harrison, fifteen, of No. 29 Telegraph street, South Boston, was rescued to-day from the elevator well at No. 181 Essex street after an hour's work by the members of Ladder Company 17. The injured lad is at the Emergency Hospital, suffering from a compound fracture of the left leg and bruises of the right leg, body and arm. It is feared that he is internally injured.

The men of Ladder Company 17 had to cut away the floor of the elevator to liberate him. Conscious to the last, he uttered no word of complaint. Just before he was released, he spoke to Patrolman McCarry of the Lagrange street station, and said, in a faint voice, "Please don't tell my mother."

Harrison is employed by Huckins, Temple & Wood as a substitute boy while the regular boy is on his vacation. The story of the accident, as told by John Tomility of No. 13 Castle street, Waltham, another employe in the building, is as follows:

"Billy Harrison was sitting on the floor of the car, which he had raised about a foot above the first floor. I don't know just how it happened, but it seemed to me as though he leaned over and grabbed the rope which starts the car. I thought it was an accident, and I sprang to the side of the well and pulled the rope to stop the car. Just as it stopped it caught his right knee. I think he must have been maddened by the pain, for he grabbed the rope again and started the car the second time. I stopped it again, but it had moved far enough so that it caught both legs.

"I ran for the janitor. When he came, we saw that we could do nothing, and he telephoned to police headquarters. They sent the fire department around."

ASK AMERICAN'S AID TO FIND LOST SON

After having vainly searched for her son, George F. Hall, since last January, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall of No. 6 Union street, Lowell, asks the aid of the BOSTON AMERICAN in locating the boy. At the time that her son left home Mrs. Hall was confined in a hospital in Providence. They lived then at No. 77 Daboll street. The mother has exhausted every means to ascertain his whereabouts.

POLICE MAKE NEW 'BUSINESS CHANCE' RAID

Pleading not guilty to charges of conspiracy, one count, and larceny, thirteen counts, Frank G. Holcomb, fifty-four years of age, attorney, of No. 13 Wildwood street, Winchester, was to-day held in $2,500 bail by Judge Schofield of the Superior Criminal Court. Mr. Holcomb is now trying to secure bondsmen.

Inspector Armstrong last night arrested Attorney Holcomb at his home in connection with the recent crusade which District Attorney John B. Moran and the police have been making on "business chance" men. The arrest of the lawyer makes the eighth that the police have made in the last few days.

According to the indictment returned by the Grand Jury Mr. Holcomb conspired with others and was a party to the larceny of $7,000 from Lester E. Morrow, William Severance, James E. Crane, Edward Seavey, James Borwick and others.

Holcomb is well known and respected in Winchester. His wife was a teacher in the public schools there when he married her.

STRIKERS PLAN FIGHT TO FINISH

Now Appeal to International Typos' Union to Bar Non-Union Copy.

LOCAL OPERATORS MEET

Labor Commissioner Neill to handle the matter in his own way.

SIXTY-FIVE MEN AT WORK.

Superintendent Charles Ames of the New England division of the Western Union said to-day:

"Everything is going on finely to-day. We have sixty-five operators at work, which is eleven more than at the same time yesterday. We are not hiring any more, as we have enough to take care of the work.

"All of our trunk lines are open, and our local lines, including the 'fish board,' which is open to Fulton Market in New York for the first time since the strike began. The offices at the North and South stations and the Chamber of Commerce are also in full sway. Everything is going finely.

"Within a day or two our wires and operators will be working as well as before the strike."

Manager C. E. Richardson of the Postal said to-day:

"Conditions to-day are practically the same as yesterday. Business is rather lighter. We now have thirty-five operators at work at our State street office, and as yet we have not hired any more.

"Both our trunk and local lines are open and working. We are using the duplex wires to-day, as we were yesterday, and are accepting messages subject to delay."

TYPOS MAY TAKE VOTE.

Secretary Thomas P. Curtin of Typographical Union, No. 13, told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day that the question of the compositors refusing to handle copy in newspaper offices which was received over wires run by men taking the places of the striking telegraph operators, would have to be decided by the convention of the International Typographical Union, now in session in Hot Springs, Ark.

"The Associated Press is a national organization," said Mr. Curtin," and for that reason the matter would have to go before the National Board of our union. There is nothing in our constitution which provides for sympathetic action. Neither are the Telegraphers members of the New England Printing Trades Council as are most of the other newspaper office employes."

ASK AID OF PRINTERS.

Norman E. McPhail, president of the local union, is attending the convention.

The Boston union has voted to ask typographical unions of New England that their members be prohibited from putting in type any telegraph messages received from either the Western Union or the Postal Telegraph Companies.

This was the principal action taken at a meeting held in Pilgrim Hall, at which nearly all the strikers were present. No step that was ever taken in connection with a labor struggle in America ever had greater significance, and so much did this fact impress the members of the Telegraphers' Union that before it was put to a vote the proposition was thoroughly discussed.

Next to asking the members of the typographical union to take part in the struggle, the most important action taken was the classification as strike-breakers of every operator at work for the Associated Press after midnight last night.

STRIKE SPREADS.

The strike of the telegraph operators continues to spread. Of the 17,500 union men in the United States, 11,132 are out. Twenty six of the thirty-nine locals not yet out have petitioned President Small of the Commercial Telegraphers Union to call them out. Ninety-six locals are idle.

From Chicago headquarters it is declared that the general strike order will be given to-day and that every man in the organization in which Mr. Small is the head, will quit work.

The telegraphers and the Postal and Western Union companies are even further apart than they were at the outset and each side claims a victory. Commercial bodies in several cities have asked the President for Federal interference and in New York State Attorney-General Jackson will be appealed to by the operators to see if the companies are conducting the business of the public in accordance with their contracts. The Western Union and the Postal companies are firm against the idea of mediation by the Government, declaring that there is nothing to arbitrate.

The urgent request of the Chicago Board of Trade that the President endeavor to bring the strikers and the companies together has been backed up by similar appeals from the Detroit Board of Trade, the Toledo Produce Exchange and other commercial organizations. They declare the strike of sufficient magnitude to warrant Government action and that the commercial interests of the country are dangerously imperilled.

While the companies report improved service, the strikers are issuing bulletins showing that business is badly crippled.

The officials of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies wear a bold front, despite the fact the strike is proving enormously costly. They declare that in the New York main offices they have all the operators they need, and that the ordinary run of messages is being handled. Some of the branch offices of both companies have been opened and others will be named soon, the companies declare.

nedy, may she not believe it as to George Glover and his daughter?"

The decision of the masters upon the question now being argued rests upon whether the alleged delusions will or have affected her relations with the "next friends." As evidence of this during his argument Attorney Howe read a letter alleged to have come from Mrs. Eddy at Pleasant View to a person whose name was not given, in which it was declared that her son was attempting to break her will by "malicious animal magnetism."

Sought Copyright Lawyer.

The recipient of this letter, so Mr. Howe read, was directed to seek the best copyright lawyer outside of Boston, and with him to devise means whereby the copyright upon her books might be preserved for the Christian Science Church or some of her students after her decease, for fear that Glover should succeed in breaking her will. She declared, according to this letter read by Mr. Howe, that all the Boston lawyers she had employed were under influence of malicious magnetism.

The case of world-wide interest has now reached its dramatic stages. Face to face with the accusers of herself and advisers, Mrs. Eddy has proved a most powerful witness in her own behalf.

For more than an hour this aged woman, whose hair has been whitened and figure bent by far more than eighty years, met the masters sitting in judgment upon her and replied to their queries with clearness, acumen and evidence of broad understanding.

She was an ideal witness save for a slight impairment of the hearing, which she freely confessed. In course of her examination Mrs. Eddy told in terms which were almost inspiring the story of Christian Science, of its beginning as a revelation in her soul, of its spirit and its spread. Eagerly did the venerable woman speak of her faith, and she even called the Masters back after the ordeal of examination to make some of its tenets clear.

To-day, with the new interest which the case takes on there comes its climax. Despite Mrs. Eddy's wonderful showing as a witness in the hands of the Masters, the charge is made that she is afflicted with insane dementia and that her beliefs regarding Christian Science and her personal powers are "delusions" which demonstrate that she is on the verge of mental destruction.

GLOUCESTER UNVEILS TABLET TO PILGRIMS

Senator Lodge Speaks at the 284th Anniversary of Their Landing.

Special to the Boston American.

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 15.—Amid a blaze of light from the mammoth bonfire at Stage Fort Park, early to-day, the Gloucester Day celebration was ushered in. It was 284 years ago that the Rev. John White and his little band of Pilgrims came from England and landed on that beak and barren, but welcome shore of Fisherman's Field, or what is now known as Stage Fort Park. The white settlement was permanent. Roger Conant was its first Governor and in its organization the ancient Massachusetts Bay colony found its origin.

The main feature of the day's observance was a grand civic and military parade. At its head, acting as chief marshal, was the famous mining king and intimate friend of the late Cecil Rhodes, John Hays Hammond, the highest salaried man in the United States, who gained fame in the Jamestown raid in South Africa a few years ago.

Largest Tablet in U. S.

This afternoon the ceremonies appropriate to the unveiling of the mammoth bronze tablet, the largest in the country, took place. The tablet was designed by Eric Pape, a Boston artist, and bears the following inscription:

"On this site, in 1623, a company of fishermen and farmers from Dorchester, Eng., under the direction of Rev. John White, founded the Massachusetts Bay Colony. From that time the fisheries, the oldest industry in the Commonwealth, has been uninterruptedly pursuer form this port. Here in 1625 Governor Roger Conant by wise diplomacy averted bloodshed between contending forces, one led by Myles Standish of Plymouth, the other by Captain Hewes, a notable exemplification of the arbitration in the beginnings of New England. Placed by the citizens of Gloucester. 1907."

Tablet Unveiled.

The exercises were opened by William W. French and Rev. Charles Noyes Tyndell, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church offered prayer. Rev. Dr. William H. Rider was master of ceremonies, and an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor MacDonald. During the singing of America by 700 school children under the direction of Professor A. A. Spaulding, the tablet was unveiled by Miss Natalie Hammond, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond.

Henry Cabot Lodge, United States Senator, was the orator of the day, and an ode by Henry C. L. Haskell was sung by the children. Madison Cawein of Louisville, Ky., read an original poem entitled "On the Founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony." An address was delivered by Professor De Sumichrast of Harvard College, president of the Victorian Club of Boston. A poem on Gloucester by Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward was read by Herbert D. Ward. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. J. Healy, P. R., of St. Ann's Catholic Church, and the exercises were brought to a close by the children singing "Te Deum."

To-night there will be a grand carnival in the harbor.

BRAVE POLICE RESCUE 11 IN TENEMENT BLAZE

Eleven gallant rescues were made by Patrolmen Littlefield and Trainor of the East Dedham street police station at a fire which swept the four-story tenement building at No. 363 Harrison avenue to-day. Four other people in the building made their own way out.

Three of the rescues were made in the nick of time. A lodger named Harry Connier, on the third floor, was borne out unconscious from the dense smoke.

The women on the fourth floor, Mrs. Dora Sacks and her daughter, Miss Annie Sacks, were also unconscious when the policemen groped their way to the top of the building. When the policemen started down with the unconscious women they found the stairways blocked by fire and smoke. Cut off from this exit the policemen took the helpless women out on the fire escape, over the roof to the roof of an adjoining building and thence to the ground.

In Serious Condition.

Connier and the two Sacks women were so far overcome by smoke that they were revived with difficulty. They are still in serious condition.

The fire started from some unknown cause in the ground floor dry goods store of Isaac Werner.

On the second floor lived Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Saperstein and six children. On the third floor were Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schawber, two boys and Harry Connier, their lodger. On the top floor were Mrs. and Miss Sacks.

All the tenants were asleep when the fire was discovered at 7:15 a. m. Attracted by the shouts of people in the thickly populated neighborhood, Patrolmen Littlefield and Trainor rushed to the building, hustled up the first stairway and roused the Saperstein family. The patrolmen carried down six Saperstein children, rushed to the third floor and took out the two Schawber boys, but overlooked Lodger Connier, whose presence on that floor was not told to them at first.

Found Together Unconscious.

Hearing when they got down to the street that a lodger was left on the third floor the patrolmen dashed upstairs again and found Connier unconscious in his bed. They carried him downstairs, then went up to the fourth floor and took out the Sacks mother and daughter by way of the roof.

All this time the firemen were having a stiff fight with the flames, which shot up through the hallways in lively fashion. The fire did about $2,500 damage.

There was the usual tenement neighborhood excitement during the fire. Men, women and children, in all shades and conditions of scanty attire, poured into the street and added to the general confusion about the burning building.

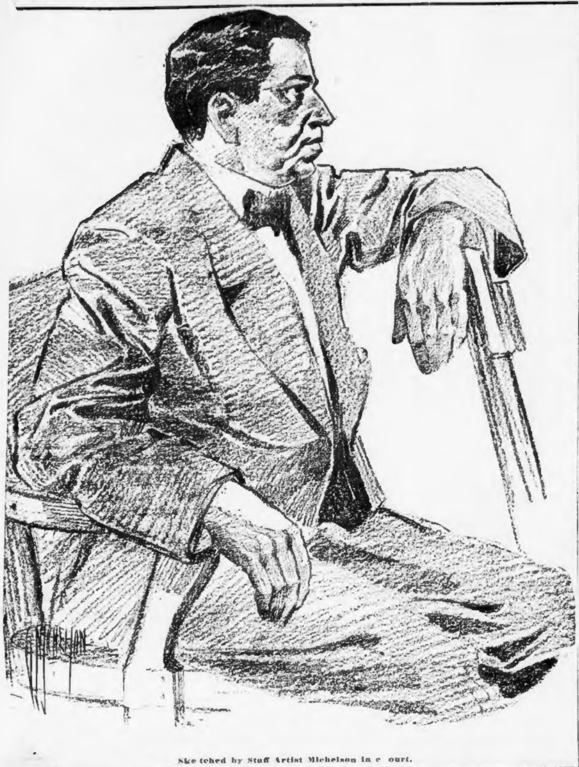
INDICTED FOR BRIBERY

James Doyle, Superintendent of Streets, manager of Mayor Fitzgerald's campaign, charged by the Grand Jury with corruption in connection with the passage of the $1,500,000 loan bill by the City Council.



Sketched by Staff Artist Michelson in court.

DOYLE INDICTMENT HOLDS UP BONDS

and adviser for attempting to bribe councilmen to vote for the loan bill which was framed by the Mayor means if there are any more disclosures that there will be a Republican Mayor and city government next year.

Members of the Tammany Club, the Curley political organization, thronged City Hall this morning, anxious to find out what is to happen next.

Tammany Men Anxious.

Tuesday night and again last night the club members gathered at the headquarters, without notification from the club officials, and discussed action that would have to be taken to squelch any more grand jury investigations.

They were much worried because rumors had reached them that a prominent member of the club had been indicted.

This member was satisfied himself yesterday that he had been indicted, and when the official announcements were made that only Doyle and Hatton had been indicted, he had made arrangements for bail for himself, and had engaged an attorney.

Fighting for Delay.

The Mayor's attorney, his political advisers and the friends of Superintendent of Streets Doyle have already began strenuous work to delay action in the indictments found against Doyle and Hatton, and they were busy declaring this morning that the cases will never come to trial.

"Moran will never try me on this charge," was the statement of Superintendent of Streets Doyle to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"Moran is persecuting me so that he can further his own political ends," declares the Mayor's political brains.

District Attorney Moran denies that he has any personal interest in the prosecution of Doyle and Hatton.

He is doing his duty as Suffolk County prosecutor, he says, and he will not stand any interference from Doyle's friends or any one else.

Doyle Bitter at Moran.

When Superintendent of Streets Doyle reached his office this morning he looked less worried than he did yesterday and he was bitter toward the district attorney.

Even if he is found guilty of the attempted bribery charge the Mayor's political brains is convinced that he and the Fitzgerald machine will be able to defeat District Attorney Moran in the next election.

"I am on my job, and am not worrying," he sai dto a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "I propose to get down to the business of my department now. I have not been able to do much work for the last three days with this indictment hanging over me.

"What effect do I think it will have on the political situation?

"I do not believe the indictment will have any effect on the Mayor or his administration. An indictment under the late District Attorney Oliver Stevens meant something, but under a District Attorney who has indicted such men as R. Clipston Sturgis and Horace G. Allen, while not exactly to be considered as a joke, and is humiliating and an annoyance, will not be taken seriously by the citizens."

HOUGHTON'S TO BREAK BARGAIN RECORD OF HUB

Dodge-Spear's Entire Stock to Be Sold at Sensationally Low Prices.

$93,400 FOR STORE FULL

All of Boston's best bargain sales are to be forgotten after Houghton & Dutton next Monday begin the sale of the entire stock of the Dodge-Spear Company which they purchased before Judge Dodge in the United States Circuit Court. The Houghton & Dutton firm purchased all of the Dodge-Spear stock, fixtures and good will in the face of the keenest competition, for $93,400.

The stock is new, clean and in good shape. There are huge cases of Summer goods that have not even been opened. Owing to the conditions of the market it was necessary to order these goods months ago, before the Dodge-Spear Company thought of going out of business.

Sensational Sales.

Next Monday the immense stock, embracing practically everything to be found in a modern department store such as the Dodge-Spear Company conducted, will be found in Houghton & Dutton's and at prices the like of which was never dreamed of in Boston and New England before.

Sensational sales! All records in Boston are to be broken when Houghton & Dutton begin the sale of the Dodge-Spear stock. At present hundreds of clerks and teamsters are busy removing this vast stock of goods from the Dodge-Spear store to that of Houghton & Dutton.

Here are some of the goods carried by the Dodge-Spear concern, and which Houghton & Dutton are to sell at slaughter prices next Monday. On the fifth floor were trunks bags, dresssuit cases and all traveling requisites. On the fourth floor were the carpet coverings, rugs, carpets, mattings and the grocery and meat department. On the third floor were the men's and boys' clothing, bedding, hammocks, toys and games.

Big Attraction for Women.

On the second floor the Dodge-Spear Company carried its women's clothing, millinery, dresses, muslin garments and the like. The balcony contained the music, books, stationery and pictures.

On the main floor were the dress goods, silks, wash goods, small wears, veilings, ribbons, umbrellas, men's furnishings, shoes, drugs, perfumeries, jewelry and a host of other things too numerous to mention.

In the basement were the domestics such as blankets, bed coverings, tinware, kitchenware, crockery, china, lamps, baskets, etc.

All of this mammoth stock will be found at Houghton & Dutton's next Monday morning awaiting the thrifty shoppers of Boston and New England and at prices that will astound veteran bargain seekers.

MOUNTED PORCUPINE FOR JUDGE MILLER

BANGOR, Aug. 15.—A Bangor taxidermist has received for mounting the carcass of a young porcupine, the property of Chief Justice Fuller of the United States Supreme Court. This is the first porcupine received here this year for mounting, and it is considered to be something of a novelty for a high Government officer to prefer the prickly beast to moose, deer or even the Teddy bear.

As a mater of fact, there is no demand whatever for the Teddy bear, or any other kind of a bear—that is, in mounted form.

OBSERVE FEAST OF ASSUMPTION

The Catholic church to-day observes the Feast of the Assumption. Masses were said in all the churches of the dioceses this morning, and many of the faithful received holy communion. At the Immaculate Conception, on Harrison avenue, which is under the direction of the Jesuit fathers and which is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the services were on an elaborate scale. A solemn high mass was celebrated. The music was by the regular choir.

HOFFMAN TO STAY AT DEER ISLAND

"I am going to remain at Deer Island. I am perfectly satisfied and have no idea of resigning my position as master of the Deer Island House of Correction," says Captain Frederick G. Hoffman of the report that he was to leave Deer Island owing to interference from City Hall.

FIRE DESTROYS MAINE RESORT

FALMOUTH FORESIDE, Me., Aug. 15.—While hundreds of Summer cottagers, stripped almost to the skin and armed with shovels, pickaxes and buckets, battled desperately but in vain, Underwood Spring Casino, one of the most beautiful all-season resorts on the coast of Maine, was destroyed by fire.

Driven by a fearful gale, the flames swirled down through a wooded gulch to the Summer Theatre, a picturesque little building nestling in the pines at the foot of a steep declivity, burned that and then rushed back up the hill, wiping out every seat in the great natural amphitheatre.

DROUGHT CLOSES MILLS.

JEWETT CITY, Ct., Aug. 15.—The present dry spell is probably the most disastrous of any during the last half century, and has compelled many factories in the eastern part of the State to close down on account of the drying up of the streams.

MET AFTER 36 YEARS APART

LAWRENCE, Aug. 15.—Mrs. Catherine Fitzpatrick of No. 137 Park street, this city, and her brother, Patrick Flynn of San Angelo, Tom Green County, Tex., are to-day planning a little reunion party. The brother and sister had not met for thirty-six years, and they intend to properly celebrate the event.

Both brother and sister were born in Ireland, coming to this country when young. In 1868 they settled in Lawrence. Three years later Mr. Flynn went West and was lost track of by his sister.

While visiting the Jamestown Exposition Mr. Flynn decided to come on to this city and look up his sister, or at least obtain some tidings of her.

On reaching the house where his sister lives he had much difficulty in making himself known to her, but when at last it came over her who he was she was almost overcome with delight.

MRS. EDDY'S ORDEAL REPORTED BY STENOGRAPHER

Venerable Head of Christian Science Church Answers Questions of Masters Appointed to Determine Her Competency in a Wearing Interview Lasting an Hour, Intelligently and Shrewdly.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, in an hour's trying interview with Judge Edgar Aldrich, Dr. George F. Jelly of Boston and Hosea G. Parker, the three masters appointed to determine her mental condition, answered the searching questions put to her intelligently and alertly. The full stenographic report of her examination follows:

Judge Aldrich—Mrs. Eddy, the gentlemen here wish to have an interview with you, and we desire to make this call as comfortable as possible for you, and we want you to let us know if we weary you.

Mrs. Eddy—I am very glad to see you, and thank you for the suggestion.

Q.—What was your native town? A.—Bow, in New Hampshire. My father's farm lies on the banks of the Merrimac. He did much of his haying in Concord, but it was in Bow the house was.

Q.—How long have you lived in Concord? A.—About twenty years; between eighteen and twenty this time. At this time, do you mean?

Q.—Yes, the last time. A.—Since I came here, after my marriage, and residence in Boston.

Q.—Well, the gentlemen present want to ask you some questions—. A.—And I beg pardon, my only difficulty is a slight deafness. I can see to read common pica, but I can't hear distinctly without some difficulty.

Q.—I do not think I speak very distinctly. A.—I hear you.

Q.—Mr. Chandler says I do not. A.—I hear you. I don't feel that at all.

Q.—We want to make this interview as pleasant for you as possible—. A.—Thank you very much.

Q.— —and to have regard all the time to your comfort and convenience, and if you feel at all fatigued we want to have you say so at any time. A.—What?

Worldliness Fatigues Her.

Q.—If you feel fatigued, we want to have you speak of it and let us know. A.—Thank you. I can work hours at my work, day and night, without fatigue when it is in this line of thought, but when I go to worldliness I am sometimes fatigued by it, and yet, these things are indispensable and I regard them as sacred.

Q.—Did you acquire all this property here at the outset, or did you acquire it gradually? A.—I purchased it at the outset and suggested every construction and arrangement of my grounds throughout, and I still attend to it.

Q.—How many acres have you? A.—Really, I don't know the number of acres.

Q.—Well, that is something that women do not always carry in their minds. A.—This little pond was made for me by my friends. It is an artificial pond. I have a little boat down there in the boathouse.

Q.—(By Dr. Jelly.) All this has been done under your direction, has it? The development of this place has all been under your direction, has it?

Q.—(By Judge Aldrich.) The development of the property has been under your personal direction, Dr. Jelly asks. A.—It has. You can ask my foreman, August Mann. He resides in the cottage.

Dr. Jelly—We shall be glad to take your word for it, Mrs. Eddy, and no one else's.

Q.—(By Mr. Parker.) Do you raise fruit here on the place? I see you have fruit trees. A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Oh, you do! A.—And there were no trees except Normandy pines when I came here. The rest of the trees I had planted, and when I suggested a large tree to be planted, they laughed at me and I said, "Try it and see if it will succeed." Every one of these trees round here, (indicating) were planted by myself—that is, not by myself, but by my direction.

Q.—(By Judge Aldrich.) I have heard now and then that you have taken an interest in public affairs round about Concord and other places in New Hampshire. What about that? I have heard occasionally that you have given money to the city of Concord, and perhaps to other parts of the State, for highways and other institutions, what about that? A.—I have, with great pleasure. When I came here they had no State Fair grounds, and very little pavement. A one-horse car moved once an hour. They have two horses now hourly—there was very little done in Concord compared with what I anticipated when I came. It seemed to be going out, and I desire the apparent vigor and flourishing condition of this dear city now. I had a great desire to build up my native place—am I talking too much?

To Help Native Place.

Q.—No. We are all interested in what you say. A.—They asked me in Boston to remain. Jordan & Marsh, White, and other firms requested me very earnestly not to leave the city, and they said to me, "Haven't we helped you accumulate money since you have been here?" and I replied, "Haven't I helped you?" and they said, "Yes, you have, and that is why we want to have you stay." Then I said, "I want to go home and help my native State a little."

Q.—(By Dr. Jelly.) And this was how long ago, Mrs. Eddy? A.—Between eighteen and twenty years.

Q.—Did you go directly to this place then—to this spot? A.—I did, and there was a hut there, a simple hut. I had it moved up and I made what there is here. The house was not built by myself, it was moved from where my cottage is. I built the cottage and moved that house which was then in its place here.

Q.—(By Mr. Parker.) Did you come direct from Boston here? A.—I did.

Q.—To this very place here? A.—Pardon?

Q.—To this very place here? A.—Yes, sir. They laughed at me for taking this place, and I said, "You will see it will be pretty, pretty soon."

Q.—Did you live on State street here in this town? Didn't you live on State street at a time? A.—I didn't at this time, but I have resided on State street.

Q.—When was that, Mrs. Eddy? A.—It was when I—well—I should think it was about seventeen years ago.

Q.—How long did you live there, Mrs. Eddy, on State street? A.—About two years.

Q.—And from State street you came here? A.—Yes. Q.—Then, when you came from Boston, you came and resided on State street first, didn't you? A.—I think I did. I had forgotten that.

Q.—And from State street you moved here? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—(By Judge Aldrish.) Some one was telling me that you had given to the public streets—the improvement of streets in Concord—is that so? A.—I have, $10,000 at one time.

Q.—Where was that expended? A.—It has been expended on this street and other streets, Main and State street.

Q.—Was that done at the suggestion of anybody, or was it your own idea? A.—I can't decide strictly where it was expended. I know it was on the streets.

Q.—Well, the original idea, the idea of giving money to the city of Concord for streets, was it your own idea, or suggested by someone? A.—It was mine. They consulted me with regard to it. My students contributed towards it also and left the decision to me. When I built this church there I put into it one-half my property. Mr. Whitcomb, the builder, an honest man, told me it cost over $200,000.

Q.—It is a beautiful structure. A.—I think so.

MRS. EDDY PLEASES MASTERS BY SHREWD INVESTMENT OPINIONS

Mrs. Eddy was then asked as to her opinions on investments. The examination follows:

Q.—Now about your investments. We will touch on those just a little to day, not much. About your investments, you have some income, I suppose, now? A.—Some income, yes.

Q.—My life insurance is coming due pretty soon, and I want to make a good use of it. What do you consider good investments? A.—I don't put it into life insurance, never. God insures my life.

Q.—I carry a little life insurance and it is coming due, so I am interested, you know. You wouldn't advise my throwing it away, would you? For instance, my life insurance comes due next year. A.—Yes, I respect that. I respect the life insurance; I think it is very valuable to many, but I haven't any need of it.

Q.—It was not really in that sense that I suggested it. I wanted to get your idea as to what would be a good investment. A.—Yes.

Q.—What do you say? A.—Shall I tell you my ideas?

Q.—Yes. A.—Trust in God. God is life. God is infinite. Therefore, if we are the image and the likeness of Infinity, we have no beginning and no end, and are His image and likeness, that is my life insurance.

Q.—I do not think you quite caught my idea. A.—Perhaps not. I beg pardon.

Q.—It was not a question of that at all—at least, my thoughts were not running in that particular direction, but what would be a sound investment of money that comes from life insurance, or anything else? A.—For this property?

Q.—No. A sound investment of money.

Q. (By Mr. Parker)—How would you invest it, he means? A.—Well, I should invest it in the hands, at my age, of trustees that I could vouch for from my own knowledge. And why? Because when I found my church was gaining over 40,000 members, and the field demanding me all over the world, I could not carry on the letters, make answers to inquiries that were made of me, then I said: "Which shall I do, carry on this business that belongs to property, or shall I serve God?" And I said—and it came to me from the Bible—"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve. Ye cannot serve God and Mammon!" Then I chose, and I said: "So help me God," and I launched out, and I give my property—I gave $913,000 to the trusteeship, to others for the benefit of my son—no, not for the benefit of my son, but—no, $913,000 trusteeship for myself, for myself. For my son I gave $125,000 into trusteeship for himself and for his family.

Q. (By Judge Aldrich)—Where did that idea of putting your property into the hands of trustees originate, with yourself or somebody else? A.—Pardon?

Q.—I take some part of the fault to myself, because I do not enunciate distinctly. I am aware of it, and it is a disadvantage that I cannot correct. But where did the idea of putting your property into the hands of trustees originate, with yourself or somebody else? A.—Utterly with myself. It came to me in an hour in this room, and I think the first one that I named it to was Laura Sargent, and I said to her: "Don't speak of it, but I feel impressed that it is my duty."

Q.—When was that? A.—That was in February, 1907. I think it was May—February. I don't mean May; I mean February, 1907.

Q.—You mean last Winter? A.—How?

Q.—Last Winter, you mean? A.—I do.

Her Views on Investments.

Q.—Now this is all interesting and useful, but still I have not quite made myself understood. For instance, without regard to your trusteeship now, if you had a hundred thousand dollars to invest to-day, and we will lay aside for the purposes of this question the matter of trusteeship, what kind of investments would you consider sound, Municipal bonds, or Government bonds, or bank stock, or what? A.—I prefer Government bonds. I have invested largely in Government bonds, and I prefer bonds to stocks. I haven't entered into stocks.

Q.—Why? A.—Because I didn't think it was safe for me. I didn't want the trouble of it, that was all. Perhaps I was mistaken, but that is my business sense of it, and the only time I took the advice of a student and went contrary I lost $10,000 by it.

Q.—What is that? A.—What?

Q.—What was that? A.—That was an investment that was made in property at the West where the land, they said, was coming up and going to be a great advancement in value, and I lost it, and I never got caught again. I always selected my own investments.

Q.—How do you select them now? How do you select them? A.—Now?

Q.—Yes. A.—I leave them to my trustees.

Q.—Before that? Before then?

Q.—Yes. A.—I will tell you. I had books that gave definitely the population of the States, and their money values, and I consult those, and when I see they are large enough in population and valuation to warrant an investment I make it.

Q.—Well, now, upon what philosophy do you base your calculations upon population? A.—Upon population?

Q.—Yes. Upon what philosophy, that is, why do you take population as the standard? A.—Because I think they can sustain their debts of course, and pay them, can't they?

Q.—Well, I should think that was pretty sound. Would you go West for municipal investments, or would you rather trust yourself in the East, in New England we will say? A.—I would rather trust my trustees now. I don't take those things into consideration.

Q.—Dr. Jelly desires that I should ask you, laying aside for the present the matter of trusteeship, what would be your idea, whether there was greater security of investment in New England municipalities or Western? A.—Municipalities I should think.

Q.—East or West? Would you make any distinction between the East and the West? A.—The East I should say.

Q.—(By Dr. Jelly) Mrs. Eddy, are you willing to tell us something about the development of your special religion? Are you willing to tell us about that, how the matter came about, and how it has existed and developed? It would be interesting to us to know if you are willing to tell us about your so-called Christian Science. Tell us something about the development of that; are you willing to do that? A.—If you will sit nearer I can tell you more distinctly. That is why I dread a court room, because I can't hear distinctly.

Q.—What I ask, Mrs. Eddy, is if you are willing to tell us something of the development of your so-called Christian Science? A.—I would love to do it.

Invalid in Childhood.

Q.—Tell us as fully as you please. I think we would all like to hear it. A.—I was an invalid born in belief. I was always having doctors—

Q.—When you say "born in belief" I perhaps do not understand what you mean. A.—I mean born according to human nature, born not of God but of the flesh. That is what I mean. I was an invalid from my birth.

Q.—Can you tell us something about the way in which you were an invalid, if you can recollect it? A.—No, I cannot recollect it, only I was weak and a dyspeptic.

Q.—I asked you to tell me something about the development of Christian Science. Will you go on, if you please? A.—I would gladly do it, as I said.

Q.—Go on if you will. A.—My father employed M. D.'s of the highest character, and they were estimable men, and they would say—Dr. Benton was one, and he said, and the others said: "Don't doctor your child, she has got too much brains for her body, keep her out doors, keep her in exercise and keep her away from school all you can, and don't give her much medicine." Then it was all allopathy, you know.

Q.—Can you tell us how long ago that was, please—about how long? I don't suppose you can tell exactly, but somewhere near. A.—No. I should say I was 18 years old, along there, about there, and it came to me—no, I wasn't as old as that, I think—and it came to me through Dr. Morrill that he was a homeopath, and I had never heard of that before. It was a new subject in New Hampshire, and father says: "Well, I thought he was a fine fellow, but he must have gone mad to have taken up homeopathy." Well, that was the general idea of things, and when he came to Concord people thought that of him generally, I think, but he healed cases that the other M. D.'s did not, and my father employed him and I got well under his treatment. Then you asked me to tell my footsteps!

Q.—I did. A.—And I studied homeopathy—May I lean back in my chair?

Her First Cure.

Q.—Yes, and if you get tired say so. A.—Then, I said, I will study homeopathy. I did. I was delighted with it. I took a case that a doctoress up there considered hopeless, and I cured the case, and she was like a barrel in the bed, full of water, and I cured her right up. I began to think something about what it was that cured when the highest attenuation——

Q.—What did you say about the highest attenuation? A.—I began to find the highest attenuation in which the drug absolutely appeared, and I sent that attenuation to Dr. Jackson of Boston and asked him if he could discover the origin of that.

Q.—Was it Dr. Jackson the chemist? A.—It was common table salt.

Q.—Was it Dr. Charles T. Jackson, the chemist? A.—Yes, sir; and he replied to it," I cannot find a particle of it."

Q.—I knew him personally. A.—Did you?

Q.—Yes. A.—I knew it was so, and said "I will be safe and see whether I am deceived or not." I went to work on a patient and I gave them a high attenuation of medicine, and they took it and recovered rapidly. Then there were symptoms of relapse and I had been quite interested in homeopathy and thought by giving too much of this even diluted, attenuated medicine there might be a crisis produced and difficulty, and so I thought I wanted them to stop, and I took away every bit of the medicine and gave them a single pellet unmedicated, nothing but the sugar pellet, and they went on and gained just the same. At last I said to them, "Now you don't need medicine, you go without it," and they said "I will." In three days they came to me and said "I feel some of the old symptoms." I repeated my pellet, not one particle of medicine, and they began to gain again. There was my first discovery of the Science of Mind. That was a falling apple to me. I said "This is plain to me, that mind governs the whole question." I was always of a very religious turn of mind, sacredly praying always to keep from sin. Then I was afraid to take a step. I waited and prayed for God to direct me, and see what next? The next thing I found were spiritualists who were claiming to be mediums. I went into their tracts to find what they were doing, and found it was a humbug and hypocrisy, and I pronounced it so. Shall I go on with this unnecessary detail?

PARKER EXAMINES MRS. EDDY AS TO SCIENTIST DOCTRINES

At this point the Board of Masters stepped out of the room, and returned in a few minutes.

Dr. Jelly—I will not trouble you to go into that any further now, but Mr. Parker would like to ask you a few questions.

Mrs. Eddy—Yes. Shall I continue this subject to show how I entered into the understanding of Christian Science?

Dr. Jelly—I will leave that to Mr. Parker.

Q. (By Mr. Parker)—I am afraid you are getting weary. I would stop that line of thought now. I want to talk about everyday affairs, may I? A.—Yes.

Q.—If we desire on some other occasion to have a talk with you, we will come again. A.—Thank you.

Q.—We do not want to weary you, but, Mrs. Eddy, you have not travelled much—you have not gone about the State much, have you? A.—No, I haven't.

Q.—Do you know where I live? A.—No, I do not.

Q.—I live in Claremont. A.—In Claremont?

Q.—Yes, over on the Connecticut River. We think it is a very beautiful town. A.—Yes, it is, I am told.

Q.—In your drives, how far do you drive every day? A.—I am out anywhere from half an hour to an hour.

Q.—Do you feel refreshed? Why do you go to drive? A.—Yes, it is a pleasant recreation. It keeps me away from my desk and I get rested.

Q.—Do you feel refreshed when you come back? A.—Yes.

Q.—You don't leave your home here; at least, you don't go out of town, or out of the city anywhere? A.—No.

Q.—Would you have sufficient strength, do you think, to take the train for Boston? Could you do that? A.—I could, but I should not wish to undertake it because I have so much resting upon me here to do.

Her Day's Doings.

Q.—I see. How many hours in the day do you work in an intellectual way? How many hours in the day do you keep your mind upon your work? A.—Well, I rise in the morning at six and I have but three hours during the day when I am not at work.

Q.—Only three hours? A.—Only three hours.

Q.—And you retire at what time? A.—At nine.

Q.—What time do you breakfast? A.—I take my breakfast at seven, and I have a lunch—we have no dinners here, and have not had for many years—we lunch at twelve. I take my lunch at twelve and my supper at six, and I have the care of the house as much as I ever had it.

Q.—Now your intellectual work, or your work in connection with your subject, do you write? Are you writing? Do you write letters nowadays? A.—Why, I write them almost entirely, or dictate them. They never write letters for me, only through dictation; then I look them over and see if they are right.

Q.—You look the mover yourself? A.—Yes, I do.

Q.—Is that invariable? Don't you ever let letters go away from you without that? A.—I do not when they pertain to the business of my own.

Q.—Is that so with regard to your property affairs, that you look over the letters before they are sent away? A.—Yes, unless I don't know when they write.

Q.—My attention is called to your last answer. I asked you if you looked over your letters pertaining to your property matters and you said you did, unless they wrote letters when you didn't know about them. A.—I am answering you there about my actions before I constituted the trusteeship.

Q.—Yes, but I suppose you have more or less business now, don't you, of a financial character? A.—Yes.

Q.—But the large responsibility you put upon your trustees? A.—Yes. Mr. Fernald here is the superintendent of the Old Folks' Home, so he is a good man to take care of me, isn't he?

Why Not in Love and Unity?

Q.—Yes, I know him. A.—And I know Henry Baker, my cousin, and I certainly know Archibald McLellan, and a better man we do not need to have. Now, I was thinking why we can't have this all in love and unity and good will to men.

Q.—It is. Do you read more or less, Mrs. Eddy? A.—Indeed, I do.

Q.—You do? A.—Every chance I get, for a rest.

Q.—Are you fond of music? A.—I used to be exceedingly, and I have got an artificial singer up here in my house. You know what I mean by that. I will have them show it to you in the vestibule in the house. I will call them to show it to you. (Ringing bell for attendant, who responds promptly).

Mrs. Eddy—(To the attendant) Tell Mr. Frye to come to me.

The attendant—Yes.

Mrs. Eddy—It will imitate a voice.

Q.—Were you musical in your younger days? A.—Yes. I never was taught, but all the rest of the family were, and yet I could compose music. (Mr. Frye came in at this point and was introduced to the Board of Masters).

Sends Frye for Graphaphone.

Mrs. Eddy—Mr. Frye, I want you to show them my artificial singer, won't you?

Mr. Frye—Yes. It is a graphaphone, gentlemen.

Q.—(By Judge Aldrich) I want to say before going that my mother is still living and she is 87 years of age. A.—Give my love to her.

Q.—I will. A.—And tell her God bless her, and that she is not a day older for her 87 years, if she is growing in grace.

Q.—Well, she feels pretty happy. A.—I have no doubt she is. I mean more decaying when I say "older." She is rising higher. Decay does not belong to matter so much as to mind, does it? We don't lose our faculties through matter so much as mind, do we? Now, my thought is, that if we keep our mind fixed on Truth, God and Life and Love, He will advance us in our years to a higher understanding and change our hope into faith, and our faith into spiritual understanding, and our words into works, and our ultimate faith into the fruition of entering into the Kingdom. That is my thought.

MRS. EDDY CALLS BACK MASTERS; TALKS ON SCIENCE

After listening to the graphophone a mesage was brought Judge Aldrich that Mrs. Eddy wanted to see the Board of Masters again, because she thought there was something she had omitted, and there upon the Masters returned to her room.

Her Birth in the Spirit.

Mrs. Eddy—When I came to the point it was mind that did the healing, then I wanted to know what mind that was. Was it the mind which was in Christ Jesus, or was it the human mind and human will? Then I went to investigating spiritualism and mesmerism and hypnotism to see if I could find God and I didn't find God there, therefore I turned to God in prayer and said, "Just guide me, guide me to that mind which is in Christ," and I took the Bible and opened it to the words, "Now, go write it in a book." I can show you where it is in the Bible. I then commenced writing my consciousness of what I had seen, and I found that human will was the cause of disease instead of its cure, that hypnotism and mesmerism or human concepts did not heal, they were the origin of disease instead of its cure, and that the Divine mind was the healer, and then I found it through the Scripture—through the Scripture—"He healed all our diseases. Go into the field, preach the gospel, heal the sick," and I felt there was my line of labor, and that God did the healing, and I could no more heal a person through mortal mind or will power than I could heal them by cutting off their heads, and I would not heal them by it, for I don't know how to do it. When they began to talk mesmerism first, I began to doubt it, and I said to a facetious student, "Hanover Smith, you go into the other room and see if I can sit down and tell lies enough to make you suffer." He went into the other room and I commenced what they said they said to make folks sick, and I did my best talking it, and he came in and I said, "Hanover, do you feel mean?" He said, "I never felt better in my life than I do now; I feel better than when I went in; I feel rested." A Christian Scientist can no more make a person sick than they can be a sinner and be a Christian Scientist. They can no more make them suffer or injure them in any way; they have not the power to do it. All the power that they have comes from on High. We have no other power and no faith in any other power. Now, I have finished. I thank you for your kindness and attention very much.

12,000 Women Join Fight By Mrs. Blatch to Defeat Restaurant 'Escort Rule'

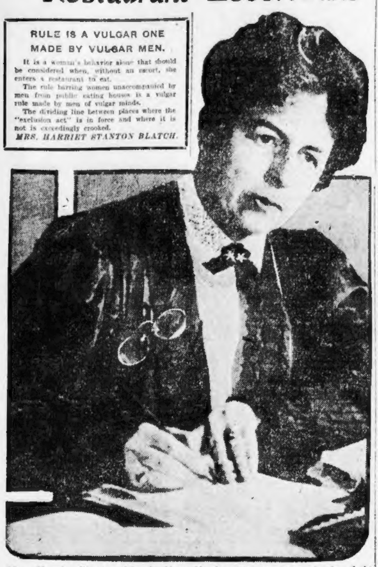
RULE IS A VULGAR ONE MADE BY VULGAR MEN.

It is a woman's behavior alone that should be considered when, without an escort, she enters a restaurant to eat.

The rule barring women unaccompanied by men from public eating houses is a vulgar rule made by men of vulgar minds.

The dividing line between places where the "exclusion act" is in force and where it is not is exceedingly crooked.

MRS. HARRIET STANTON BLATCH.



Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, New York woman who leads fight against barring of her sex, when unescorted, from leading hotels and restaurants.

They Insist on Right to Be Served With Food When Unaccompanied by a Man.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Twelve thousand women of one organization have joined in the fight of Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch to bring to their knees the restaurants of this city which exclude from their tables women unaccompanied by men.

The militant twelve thousand are members of the Women's Self-Supporting League. Mrs. Blatch is their president. Many of the members are prominent in professional life, where they stand on an equal footing with the other sex. All of them are firm believers in absolute equality of man and woman. If the suit in the lower court goes against Mrs. Blatch, they will take an appeal.

Calls it a Vulgar Rule.

Any one of the big army is ready at all times to present arguments they declare are unanswerable against the man-made rules, which compel, in many restaurants, a lone woman to leave their tables unfed. Mrs. Blatch calls the exclusion act "a vulgar rule, made by men of vulgar minds." She expects to prove furthermore that it is an illegal act.

"They tell me," said this aggressive suffragette, "that they wish to keep out objectionable women.

"But they do not keep them out at all. They say I should be hurt by sitting at a table while a woman of the underworld sat near and made an appointment with a man.

"That sounds very well to the thoughtless. But just consider that the objectionable woman can make her appointment on the doorstep of the restaurant with her man and then the two of them can come in and sit by me."

Other members of the league urge the same point and go further, insisting that the "barbaric rule" is an incentive to young women to become reckless in making acquaintances. Knowing that they must be in the company of a man in order to be served, they will accept advances they would otherwise scorn.

"A woman's behavior is the thing to take into account. Her character cannot always be determined," said Mrs. Blatch. "If she is orderly her rights as a human being and as a member of society in this Republic must not be denied her.

"If restaurant keepers have discretionary powers, see how they use them. Are 'objectionable' men barred? Perhaps a man who is so intoxicated that he cannot sit on a chair is not allowed in some of the restaurants. I have heard, however, that men are not watched very closely in this matter."

Conquers Restaurant Man.

Mrs. Blatch's daughter, who brought a restaurant man to terms recently, set a pace in so doing that many of the Self-Supporting League women say they will follow. She had occasion to go to dinner alone and was told she could not be served.

"Got to have a man with you if you eat here," said the manager.

"All right," said the young woman, "I shall go out and hire a district messenger and come back."

The idea conquered the manager instantly and the meal was spread with haste.

BOY RETURNS TO FACE $5,000 THEFT CHARGE

Springfield Bank Messenger Caught in Maine with Suit Case Full of Bills.

HAD $4,700 IN HIS ROOM

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 15.—Winfield Marsan, the "pretty boy," as his landlady describes him, messenger boy in the Chicopee National Bank in this city until July 27, and whose sudden vacation was taken just before $5,000 in new $10 gold certificates and $5 treasury notes was missed, is on his way back here from Bradley, Me., in custody of Inspector Boyle of the Springfield police force.

The lad's story to Mrs. E. Lynes, of No. 50 Everett street, this city, his landlady, that he was "going on a vacation, and when I come back I may take another," excited suspicion in the bank, as he had telephoned the bank on Monday, July 29, that he was sick. An investigation showed that $5,000 was missing. The Springfield police were notified.

Caught Through Maine Man.

It was through Charles W. Livermore of Bradley, Me., that young Marsan was finally run down by the police. Marsan went to Bangor on the steamer Camden and at the pier there met Livermore and induced him to drive him back to his home in Bradley in the hunting country.

Stories of Marsan that he was a bank clerk at a salary of $8 and the way he was ready to throw money around aroused Livermore's suspicion. When the lad was out of his room one day he investigated the new suit case, and found it about full of crisp bank notes, which counted up to $4,700.

Livermore told the Oldtown police, and they notified the Springfield police that their missing employe was in Bradley. The lad was arrested and was held for Inspector Boyle, who is to bring him here to-night.

"I can't imagine how Marsan got that money," said Arthur B. West of the Chicopee National Bank to a BSOTON AMERICAN man to-day, "unless he got it by walking right into the vault before closing hours and picked up ve packages of bills.

Boy Got the Start.

"We don't count up our cash every day, and in that way the lad got the start. There was from $50,000 to $60,000 in the bank that day. Marsan is an errand boy. He was with us about two months. I can't imagine what possessed him to take the money."

Winfied Marsan is the son of Adelard Marsan, bookkeeper for the Boston Dock Company of Bondville, a small manufacturing town of Palmer.

There's a Lesson in the Fatal Ending of This Silly Quarrel

By Beatrice Fairfax

THE other day a young couple of Camden N. J., quarrelled. The result was that the husband shot and killed his wife and then turned the revolver on himself, inflicting a mortal wound.

The cause of the quarrel was the twitting of each other about companions that they had known long before their marriage.

For that foolish cause two precious human lives were sacrificed.

These two young people presumably married because they loved each other, and yet their love was not strong enough to stand the test of "looking backward."

The moral of this is that it is wisest not to look back beyond the time when they first met and their love began.

What life is and what it is going to be is a much safer, happier speculation than what it has been.

Every girl who waits until she is twenty before marrying has been interested in at least one or two men before she met the right man.

And every man has been interested in at least ten girls before he met the right girl.

The Sensible Thing

THE sensible thing to do is not foolishly to worry over these girls and men of the past, but to take mighty good care there shall be no girls or men in the future.

When two people, brought up in widely differing environments, come together, there is bound to be a certain amonut of friction until they settle into each other's ways.

Little annoying habits that have not been visible during courtships are sure to become apparent after marriage, and it takes infinite love and patience to prevent them from developing into serious menaces to happiness.

With these every-day problems to be faced and conquered, what on earth is the sense in harking back to the days before husband and wife met and grew to love each other.

Don't be foolish, little bride. Of course your husband knew and liked other nice girls before he met you, but you were the one he chose, the one he admired the best of all.

Don't be jealous over those other shadow loves; they are past and gone with "yesterday's seven thousand years."

Avoid Quarrels

AND why should you, Mr. Young Husband, be jealous of the men who knew enough to appreciate your wife's charm in her girlhood days? The very fact that other men liked her makes it all the more complimentary that she should have chosen you from among all her swains.

Guard and keep her from the attentions of men now; that's the principal thing for you to do.

And both of you try to avoid quarrels. Life is all too short to quarrel with those we love. It is so easy to quarrel and so hard to make up again.

Never let a quarrel simmer over night, and never let a loved one go off in the morning without a kiss of reconciliation.

Devote all your energies to making the present as happy and cheerful as possible. Let yesterday and to-morrow take care of themselves.

Newest Materials for Skirt Linings

THE success of the lingerie dress depends largely upon the way it is lined, for the lining is much in evidence. "Linings must be carefully planned this season," said a couturiere. "If they are thin they wear out, and if they are coarse they show through and spoil the appearance of the gown.

"We advise our patrons to take one of three or four linings which are available this year. The first and most desirable one is the lining of taffeta. Of this we make the drop skirt, the waist lining and the coat lining.

"The second in our lining series is a material which is something like silk, and a great many persons prefer this from a wearable standpoint.

"But there is still another class, and this is the lining of lawn. We have patrons who ask for the lawn drop skirt with its silk ruffle, and we have many who prefer the lawn slips to those of silk.

"We sometimes select a good rough silk, which is sure to do good service and which gives a gown a certain body and a body color."

To Make Embroidery Smooth and Regular

DO you realize that one of the requisites of smooth and even embroidery is that the thread be inserted in the needle the right way.

You did not know there was but one method of needle threading? There is, indeed, and what's more, it is very important that the embroiderer speedily learn to distinguish them.

A thread must be inserted in the eye of a needle so that the twist seems to run down from it. If the opposite end is put in first, then the thread will be drawn through the fabric against its twist and knotting and roughness are inevitable.

A little practice will soon enable you to tell which way the twist runs. After the thread is cut, draw it tightly between the tips of the thumb and forefinger and the general direction of the twist can be quickly noticed.

This may seem a point of trivial importance, but remember that on its proper observation depend the smoothness and regularity of your work.

RIPE TOMATO PRESERVE.

SCALD and peel tomatoes, sprinkle over them their weight in sugar, and let them stand over night. f you haven't any weighing scale, just use a small bowl to measure your tomatoes in, and the same of sugar. In the morning pour off the liquid and boil to a thick syrup; add the tomatoes and boil until they look clear and seem well cooked. The time required will depend upon their size; have them soft, yet not mushy. Cook with them, sliced thin, a lemon to each pound of tomatoes. Put in a jar or glass cans, and when cold cover close. This is true and tried.

TWO BABIES: The Future King of Spain / A Possible U. S. President

Which Would You Rather Have for a Son?

ONE of these two little babies was born in the North End of Boston. The other was born in the royal palace in Madrid. Could you tell by looking at their pictures which is the baby of the North End mother and which is the baby of the Queen of Spain?

So that you may compare the two intelligently, you are informed that the fatter of the two babies is the royal infant, who, unless death or war intervenes, will some day be King of Spain.

The other tiny boy baby may some day be the President of the United States.

At any rate, the North End baby will grow up to be a sturdy American citizen, free from the stained traditions of Spanish royalty.

When this Spanish Prince came into the world he was placed on a golden platter and exhibited by his proud young father to a great concourse of nobles, grandees, diplomats and others who took part in the meaningless ceremonials of the Spanish court.

He was a cross, tired, wailing little baby before he got into the hands of his nurse and was clothed and put to bed. It is safe to say that the little North End baby had to take unwilling part in no such ridiculous performance.

It's better to be a free American baby after all than to be a fat little Spanish Prince, fenced around with ceremony and tradition. Don't you think so?

BROOKS passed it over to his companion, who saw the amount with a little start.

"A thousand pounds—not even registered—in a plain envelope. And you have no idea from whom it came?"

"None whatever," Brooks answered.

The pressman folded it up silently, and passed it back. He looked at the huge pile of correspondence and at Brooks—his dark, thoughtful face suddenly lit up with a rare gleam of excitement.

"I'm much obliged for all you've told me," he said. "If you don't mind, I'd drop in now and again down at Stepney."

Brooks sank into an easy chair, conscious at last of a more than ordinary exhaustion.

"What a Fool"

He fell asleep to awake in the cold gray of the morning, stiff and cramped, and cold to the bone. Stamping up and down the room in a vigorous attempt to restore his lost circulation, he noticed as he passed the corner of the table a still unopened letter addressed to him in a familiar handwriting.

He took it over to the window, and, glancing at the faintly sketched coronet on the back, turned it over and broke the seal.

"St. James's House, London.
"Thursday.

"My Dear Brooks:

"I have read with an amusement which I am sure you will not fail to share the shower of condemnation, approval and remonstrance which by your doings in Stepney you appear to have brought down upon your head. The religious element especially you seem to have set by the ears. I sat within hearing of our premier bishop last night at dinner, and his speculations with regard to you and your ultimate aims were so amusing that I passed without noticing it my favorite entree.

"You will have observed that it is your anonymity which is the weapon of which your antagonist makes the most use. Why not dissipate it and confound them? A Mr. Brooks of unknown antecedents might well be supposed capable of starting a philanthropic work for his own good; the same suspicion could never fall on Lord Kingston Ross, a future Marquis. You will notice that I make no appeal to you from any personal motive. I should suggest that we preserve our present relations without alteration. But if you care to accept my suggestion I would propose that you nominate me trustee of your society, and I will give, as a contribution to its funds, the sum of five thousand pounds."

Brooks swung round and sat down at his desk, drawing paper and ink toward him.

"Dear Lord Arranmore," he wrote, "I am much obliged to you for the suggestion contained in your letter, but I regret that its acceptance would involve the carrying out on my part of certain obligations which I am not at present prepared to undertake. We will, therefore, if you please, allow matters to remain on this footing. Yours sincerely, KINGSTON BROOKS."

Bareheaded he stole out into the street, and breathed freely only when he heard it drop into the pillar-box. For only he himself knew what other things went with the rejection of that offer.

"What a fool she would think me!" he murmured. "What a fool I am!"

BOOK III.

CHAPTER I.

AN early Spring came with a rush of warm west wind, sunshine, and the perfume of blossoming flowers. London put out its window boxes, and remembered that it had, after all, for two short months a place among the beautiful cities of the world. Kingston Brooks, who had just left his doctor, turned into the park and mingled idly with the throng of people.

For the first time for many months he suffered his thoughts to travel over a wider range than usual. The doctor's words had been sharp and to the point. He must have instant change—change, if not of scene, at least of occupation. Scarcely to be wondered at, Brooks thought to himself, with a faint smile, when he thought of the last twelve months, full to the brim of strenuous labor, of ceaseless striving with a herculean task. Just then he heard himself called by name, and, looking up, found himself face to face with Sybil Caroom.

"Mr. Brooks! Is it really you, then, at last?"

He set his teeth hard, but he could not keep the unusual color from his cheeks.

"It is really I, Lady Sybil. How do you do?"

Sybil was charming in a lilac-colored dress and hat as fresh and dainty as her own complexion.

"Oh, it's not the least use your looking as though you were going to edge away every moment," she declared, laughing. "I am going to keep you for quite a long time and make you tell me about everything."

"In which case, Lady Sybil," her escort remarked, good-humoredly, "you will perhaps find a better use for me at some future time."

"How sweet of you," she answered, blandly. "Do you know Mr. Brooks? Mr. Kingston Brooks, Lord Bertram! Mr. Brooks is a very old friend, and I have so many questions I want to ask him."

"Like a Ghost"

Lord Bertram, a young man, raised his hat. "The Mr. Kingston Brooks of the East End?—Lavvy's friend?" he asked, politely.

Brooks smiled.

"I am afraid," he said, "that I am the person who is being exposed—isn't that the word? I warn you, Lady Sybil, that I am a questionable character."

"I will take the risk," she answered, gayly.

"I think you may safely do so," Lord Bertram answered, raising his hat. "Good morning, Lady Sybil — morning, Mr. Brook!"

She led him toward the chairs.

"I am going to take the risk of your being in an extravagant frame of mind," she said, "and make you pay for two chairs—up here, on the back row. Now, first of all, do you know that you look shockingly ill?"

"I have just come from my doctor," Brooks answered. "He agrees with you."

"I am glad that you have had the sense to go to him," she said. "Tell me, are you just run down, or is there anything more serious the matter?"

"Nothing serious at all," he answered. "I have had a great deal to do, and no holiday during the past year, so I suppose I am a little tired."

"You look like a ghost," she said. "You have been overworking yourself ridiculously. Now, will you be so good as to tell me why you have never been to see us?"

"I have been nowhere," he answered. "My work has claimed my undivided attention."

"Nonsense," she answered. "You have been living for a year within a shilling cab ride of us, and you have not once even called. Do you know that I have written you three times asking you to come to tea?"

He turned a very white face upon her.

"Won't you understand," he said, "that I have been engrossed in a work which would admit of no distraction?"

"You have changed since Enton."

"I have been through a good deal," he said wearily.

"A Fancy"

She shuddered a little.

"Don't look like that," she exclaimed. "Forgive me, but you made me think—do you remember that night at Enton, when Lord Arranmore spoke of his work amongst the poor, how the hopelessness of it began to haunt him and weigh upon him till he reached the verge of madness? You had something of that look just now."

He smiled faintly.

"Believe me; it was a fancy," he answered, earnestly. "Remember, I am a little out of sorts to-day. I am not discouraged; I have no cause to be discouraged. A good many of the outside public misunderstand my work and Mr. Laviilette thinks I make money out of it. Then, of course, all the organized charities are against me. But in spite of all I am able to go on and increase day by day."

"Why couldn't I be an occasional helper?" asked Sybil.

"There is not the slightest reason why you should not," he answered. "We have seventeen hundred on the books, but we could always do with more, especially now we are opening so many more branches. But, you know, we should expect you to come sometimes, and how would Lady Caroom like that?"

She laughed.

"You know how much mother and I interfere with one another," she answered. "Besides, I have several friends who are on your list, and who are sent for now and then—Edie Gresham and Mary Forbrooke."

A coach passed by, with its brilliant load of woman in bright gowns and picture hats, and two or three immaculate men. They both looked up, and followed it with their eyes.

"Lord Arranmore," Sybil exclaimed, "and that is the Duchess of Eversleigh with him on the box. It doesn't seem—the same man, does it?"

Brooks smiled a little bitterly.

"The same man," he repeated. "No."

They were silent for a few moments. Then Sybil turned toward him with a little impetuous movement.

"When will you come and dine quietly with us in Berkeley square, and go to the theatre?"

He shook his head.

"It is kind of you," he said, "but——"

"When will you come and have tea with me, then?"

He set his teeth. He had done his best.

"Whenever you choose to ask me," he answered, with a sort of dogged resignation.

She looked at him, half curiously, half tenderly.

A Cooking Wrinkle

BEFORE scraping new potatoes always soak them for half an hour in salt and water. The effect afterwards is wonderful. Not only do the skins come off much more easily, but the hands will hardly be stained at all. If the hands should be stained half of a lemon rubbed on them will remove it.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

TO SOFTEN HANDS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am a stenographer and use the typewriter about six hours a day. In consequence my fingers get very hard and the skin is very tough. It is a great annoyance to me and I would like to find something to soften them.

VIRGINIA.

IF you wear gloves at night, putting them on after rubbing well into the fingers a good skin food, the skin will get soft and remain so. It is unusual for one using a typewriter to get the fingers in this condition, and it must be that you strike the keys much harder than is necessary. A light, firm touch will have the same effect and will not toughen the skin.

Rose Pastor Stokes, Wife of Millionaire, Advises Girls in Love

Rose Pastor Stokes, wife of the millionaire philanthropist, J. G. Phelps Stokes, has begun her work of advising the poor, the perplexed and the unfortunate of the East Side of New York, through the Jewish Daily Forward.

By courtesy of Abraham Cohan, editor of that paper, the BOSTON AMERICAN is enabled to present the first of her letters to its readers to-day.

ROSE PASTOR STOKES

The wife of Millionaire J. G. Phelps Stokes, who is giving advice to poor working girls of New York's East Side.

AN UNHAPPY GIRL

I HAVE been one year in this country and have vainly looked for work in a shop, so I became a servant in a respectable family. I have no trade, so could not get a job. I walked and walked and walked until my feet were swollen. Then I went to an intelligence office and got a job as servant girl. I am working for very nice people and they treat me like their own daughter. I am satisfied, but my aunt, who does nothing for me, is ashamed to have a servant girl for her niece. She says she would not let me visit her. I do not mind her, because she is mean and stingy; but I am fond of her daughter, my cousin, and it breaks my heart not to be able to see her. She is a good girl, and the two of us look very much alike. When we are together people think we are sisters. Even her voice is like mine, and she is good-natured and loves me. I am all alone in this country, and if I have to do without seeing her it will be very hard on me. Yet my aunt won't let her daughter have anything to do with me until I give up my position and look for work in a factory. I would do so if I were sure of a job; but my present job is a very good one and I like the people, and why should I take chances? I have made up my mind to do as you will tell me. Please do not keep my letter too long, because I am longing to see my cousin.

AN UNHAPPY GIRL.

I BELIEVE you are right in keeping your present position at least until you are sure of something better. There is no disgrace in doing honest work of whatever kind. As a servant for kind and appreciative people you are certainly better off than are many other girls in the factory, who work for an unkind and unappreciative boss. Your aunt has not got rid of the old-fashioned, old country prejudices against the servant girl. There is much of this feeling even here in America. It is difficult to find all the causes for this prejudice. It may be because most service is social, therefore respected, while those we to-day designate as servants do work which is peculiarly personal. It is regarded also as menial work, because perhaps it is both personal and unorganized, and because it resembles more the slavery of the olden times than does the wage-slavery of socialized industry under capitalism. Some day, when housework is more highly specialized and becomes social in its nature, it will be as rare a thing to find any one to look down upon it as a menial duty as it is now rare to find any one to regard it with due respect.

Keep your work and do it well while it remains yours to do—until you are sure that you can better yourself through a change. I think it would be helpful if you were to get yourself into a kinder, more charitable state of mind as regards your aunt. Remember, after all, she means well. She believes it is not nice to be a servant girl and does not wish to have any odium attach to you by your becoming one. She is mistaken, but her motive is kind. Write to her frequently and kindly. I think, if you can make her feel through letters and personal talks that you love her in spite of her opposition, and love her daughter, your cousin, you will be a happy enough girl. Remember that love unlocks all doors, and love means more than a mere feeling in one's heart. It is as largely an understanding in one's head. A deep sympathy born of a large understanding.

ADVISES ON LOVE AFFAIRS

WILL you let me also lay my troubles before you and will you advise me how to act? I work in a shop where there are several young men and girls. I seem to be good looking, because everybody in the shop says so, even the girls.

Of the several men who work in the shop two are unmarried and both of them have been after me. A third man, who is married, also tried to walk with me from the shop and to be nice to me, but I told him he was married, that I would have nothing to do with him and that he ought to be ashamed of himself.

What I want to speak to you about, however, are the two single men. One of them is very nice-looking, and he has been making love to me all along. The other man is not nice-looking at all, and he used to make fun of me all the time. He used to tease me until the tears came to my eyes.

I thought I hated that homely man for his harsh ways, because he made fun of me, and never said a good word to me, but one evening, when the nice looking man was not in the shop, being sick, this man waited for me downstairs and asked me to let him walk with me; he did so with a sneer as usual, but I could not help walking with him. He told me I was a fool to take up with that fellow, and asked me if I would not marry him. I thought he was joking, but he said he was in dead earnest, and then my heart began to beat, and I did not know what got into me, but I told him I would give him an answer in a couple of days later.

I do not know how to account for it, but I feel that this rough man could do anything he wanted, and now I am engaged to him.

This has been going on for months, and now I am sorry for the other fellow, who suffers very much. I am sure I will never be happy with my present fiance, because he is not nice looking, and he is as rough as ever. I wish I could get rid of him and marry the other one and be really happy, but I have not the strength, because this man can do anything he wants with me, although I see he is not nice and that I really do not like him. Something tells me I am going to my ruin.

Please tell me what to do, because I am all alone in this country, and I have nobody to advise me.

A DESPAIRING GIRL.

ONE thing is certain, you do not love this man to whom you have given your promise to marry. The right, the moral, thing to do is to at once give him up. Neither do you love the other man. So let him alone. Why not give up your present job and find another? Why not change your boarding house—get away entirely from your present surroundings and influences? This is a serious matter. Remember that marriage is not so simple a thing as eating a doughnut, nor is it of so short duration. It is serious and sacred, and lasts, or should last, for a lifetime. She or he who starts out with the thought, "Oh, well, if I fail, there are the divorce courts," is a ruined man or woman already, and peace on earth for such unstable minds there is none. This man's merits or demerits need not be discussed. The one thing that is plain to you and that you have made plain in your letter is that you do not love your fiance. And, whether you are aware of it or not, neither do you love the other man. Get away from both of them—the farther the better. One of them, or both of them, may suffer a little or much for a long or a little while, but that is nothing compared with the lifelong misery you will be averting for yourself, and one of the two, and perhaps of beings unborn, by allowing yourself to be led into a loveless marriage.

You are probably young. Life is before you. And love is worth waiting for. At any rate, it is better to live waiting and even have one's ideal die with one than to fall at the start and lose the ideal before one has barely caught sight of it.

THRILLING FEATURES OF PARKS FREE WITH SUNDAY AMERICAN

The Airships and the Velvet Coaster, with admission to Wonderland Park, is the free ticket schedule for next Monday and Tuesday afternoons and evenings, the coupons to be published in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

These are ideal hot weather attractions, nothing stuffy and close about them, the confines being the boundaries of the blue sky above and the tremendous lateral circles and half-circles described by the swiftly moving cars.

How the coupon holders enjoy the Velvet Coaster, where they go up sixty feet, then around and around in a figure eight three times, finishing with a halfcircle called the loop, with hair streaming and eyes dancing with delight.

There is a thrill about these swift rides that makes everybody a child again for the time, and the elderly seem to have just as much fun as the little folks.

Fills One with Laughter.

As to the Airships—you have all seen the great swing opposite the Fire Show, whirl and whirl. In the night time a thousand lights whirl with the machine. Six great cars, each holding eight persons, circle higher and higher, and finally way above the tops of the low buildings, until it all seems like a veritable flight in an airship.

It makes you laugh and thrills you, and laughter mixed with thrills spells health and gets one close to nature.

Remember that the arenic performances are all new. The old ones are all gone. Dajey brothers of Fall River, the expert head balancers, who learned their act while in college studying dentistry, and who now lead the world in their particular line; the Keller Cyclists; De Velde and Zelda, and other outdoor performances draw tremendous crowds daily.

Meanwhile arrange to get the BOSTON AMERICAN on Sunday and get the free tickets for next Monday and Tuesday and join the happy SUNDAY AMERICAN throng.

NEW PARAGON PARK ATTRACTIONS FOR AMERICAN READERS

How many are ordering the SUNDAY AMERICAN for the great Paragon Park free ticket offer next Sunday?

Did you know that the Great Bostock Show and the Roller Coaster, with admission to the park, were open to SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon holders two days and evenings next week?

The Bostock Show is a rare combination. No finer specimens of wild beasts exist, and no better trainers. The most daring acts are attempted there by the lady lion tamer and the lady leopard tamer. It thrills one through and through.

Bostock's Show combines an animal circus and a menagerie.

There is the baby elephant who performs tricks with human sagacity, wheels a baby carriage, eats with his trainer and waltzes.

Cute Little Baby Lion.

There are the deer and the hyenas, the tigers, leopards, lions, bears, dogs, kangaroo, monkeys, birds and, yes, there is the little baby lion the cutest wild beast in captivity in the East. The cub lion makes funny little noises and rolls on his back in playfulness.

Beast tamers say such cubs are splendid pets until they reach the meat-eating stage then they grow surly and desire to bite and scratch. Then it is they can be ruled only by fear and their appetites.

The bear circus is about the most wonderful ever. They drink from bottles, ride tricycles and automobiles, sing songs, dine at the table in groups, and do the funniest high and low stunts ever.

If you are warm after seeing this interesting and fearsome exhibition, ride on the Roller Coaster and feel the cool breezes.

The coupon of admission to the park gives you those stupendous performances of Sadie Knowlton; Speedy, the High Diver, and the Human Spider.

Girl's Death Daring Ride.

Sadie Knowlton rides from the clouds to be shot back into the sky with her bicycle and fall into ten feet of water.

Speedy does the highest dive in the world from three fifty-foot ladders tied end to end, drops into his little tank of water twice a day and tempts death, while threatening onlookers with heart failure.

The "Human Spider," called the "Monkey on a stick," goes up and down a hundred-foot rope with toes and fingers as a monkey would climb. He talks no English and cares for nothing but his special act.

Other free acts, together with the daily pageant and the gamboling of the baby elephant about the plank walk, make life a long, beautiful dream at the Electric City by the Sea.

FACE BRUISED, GIRL TELLS OF NIGHT ATTACK

Pretty Waitress in Court Faces Man She Charges With Striking Her.

Her face showing plainly the mark of a hard blow, Miss Annie Leonard, an attractive young waitress, who lives at No. Northampton place, appeared in the Municipal Court to-day against Herbert F. Breen, who, she charges, struck her when she resisted his attentions.

Breen was captured after a long chase by Patrolman Hartigan of the Lagrange Street Station, who was obliged to fire two shots in the air before the man could be brought to a stop.

Miss Leonard, dressed in a blue suit and white shirt waist and dark blue hat, was still nervous from her experience when she appeared in court. To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter she said:

"My mother has been away on a vacation in Canada and I have been alone for several days. Last night I started to enjoy a walk, as I had not been feeling well all day. I go quite a way down town when I met a girl friend of mine who lives in Charlestown. Not realizing that it was getting so late, I walked with her to Adams square, and waited there until she got her car.

"How long I waited there I don't know, but my car didn't come along and I started to walk. On Washington street, not far from Summer street, I observed a man following me. Somewhat nervous, I quickened my steps, but he caught up with me in front of Siegel's store.

"He just caught hold of my arm without a word. I pushed him away and told him to let me alone or I would call for help. With that he pulled back his arm and struck me in the face.

"The next thing I knew a police officer was helping me to my feet. I was dazed for a few moments, but I managed to walk along Washington street as far as Broadway, where the other officer had arrested the man who struck me.

"At the police station I stayed there until I had somewhat recovered and then an officer took me home. I dislike the notoriety this has brought me very much."

Breen gave his address to the police as at No. 32 Sixth street, South Boston. He had $254 in his possession.

BRAVE GIRL SAVES THREE FROM DEATH

Unassisted, Miss Lloyd Rescues Man and Two Children In Onset Bay.

ONSET, Aug. 15.—Unassisted, Miss Frances Lloyd of Brooklyn saved the lives of Henry Winslow of Boston and his two young children. The Summer colony to-day is endeavoring to find some way to show their appreciation of the wonderful coolness displayed by the young woman.

Miss Lloyd was rowing about the bay, when she saw overturned the catboat Ethelad, owned by Mr. Winslow. Putting all her strength to the oars, Miss Lloyd went to the rescue.

Mr. Winslow cannot swim. He had managed to cling to the bottom of the boat while his daughter, Caroline, aged seven, and his little son, Sears, aged five were drifting away from him.

Miss Lloyd went for the children. Both had sunk twice when she reached them. As she came near Sears, he was going down again. Miss Lloyd dove from the boat and catching the lad by the hair dragged him toward the craft. By main strength she got the boy into the rowboat.

Little Caroline had disappeared when Miss Lloyd turned again to the work of rescue, but it took only a moment for the young woman to locate the child. Almost exhausted by her struggle, the plucky girl got the child to the boat and climbed in herself.

Mr. Winslow was almost ready to let go his hold when Miss Lloyd reached him.

Despite her strength-wearing efforts, the girl took up the oars and started to row ashore that the ones she had rescued might receive proper treatment. But the yacht Winnie came along and all were taken aboard her.

VIRTUOSO JOACHIM DIES AFTER ILLNESS

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—Josef Joachim, long known as Germany's greatest violinist, died to-day. He has been ill for a long time, and a change for the worse on Saturday augured his death, as the physicians then gave up all hope for his recovery.

LIED AND WENT TO PRISON THAT FRIEND BE FREE

19-Year-Old Youth Now Asks to Be Released to Aid His Family.

After seven weeks in jail, Charles F. Waterman, nineteen years old, who took all the blame for stealing diamonds that a friend might escape, wants to secure his release that he may help his mother.

Mrs. Waterman and her three little girls appeared before Judge Schofield in the Superior Court yesterday, and the mother's plea was added to that of the boy. The little girls smiled confidently at the judge, and were rewarded with a smile back.

According to the story brought out by the questioning of Waterman, he had taken the blame for the burglary in order that he might help his friend Barron to escape.

"I did not lie intentionally," the boy told Judge Schofield. He never considered the risk he took.

Barron and Waterman were arrested together. Barron was acquitted by a jury. Waterman, on the witness stand, said the other was innocent.

Two police officers said that Waterman was the least guilty of three young men.

Sentence had been suspended in the boy's case, and Judge Schofield, after hearing all the evidence, took the case under advisement.

BOY DROWNED ON NIGHT FISHING TRIP

NORTH ANDOVER, Aug. 15.—John F. Meagher, aged twenty-one years, son of the late John Meagher, at one time world's champion walker, was drowned at midnight while pout fishing in Lake Cochickewick. Accompanied by William Praetz of Lawrence, a boy of his own age, Meagher put out for an all night fishing trip on the lake. He had just hooked a fish and was standing up in the stern of the boat when he fell overboard and sank from view. The body has not been recovered.

INDIA MISSION FOUNDER BACK FROM JUBILEE

Mrs. William Butler Home to Bay State from Field of Half Century Ago.

With 143 saloon, 229 second cabin and 1,047 steerage passengers, the Cunarder Ivernia came to her dock early to-day after lying at anchor off quarantine all last night. Good weather favored Captain Turner's good ship and a swift and pleasant voyage was completed to-day.

Among the first cabin passengers were Mrs. William Butler and her daughter, Miss Clementine Butler, of Newton Centre, who are just returning from India, where they have been for several months. Fifty years ago and over Mrs. Butler and her husband, the late Rev. William Butler, founded the first Methodist Episcopal mission in the districts of Lucknow and Bareily in India.

Daughter Went Along.

Although eighty-eight years of age, Mrs. Butler, hale and hearty, decided last Summer to accept an invitation from far India to attend the golden jubilee of the very mission which she and her husband had founded a half-century before. Last Christmas the exercises were held, and Mrs. Butler and her daughter were among the honored guests. They spent some time there and journeyed home through the continent.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day Mrs. Butler said that she had been wonderfully inspired by the progress made by the Methodist missions in India and all over the Far East. She said that she was overjoyed to find that actually 3,000 natives were members of the mission church which she and her husband had established so many years ago.

Mrs. M. A. Langham, sister of the Baroness von Sternberg, wife of the German Ambassador to this country, and her daughter wer passengers on the Ivernia. The Baroness von Sternberg was on the pier to meet her sister and niece.

Judge Lowell Returns.

Judge Francis C. Lowell, of the Massachusetts Superior Court, and Mrs. Lowell returned from a tour of European cities on the big Cunarder. The judge was the guest of many English judges during his stay in the British isles and is greatly interested in their courts.

The Rev. William H. Carr, vicar of St. Peter's Church, Leigh, England, is making the round trip on the Ivernia just for the sea voyage.

George T. Coppins and wife of Newton, were also returning Americans on the ship. Miss Helen Beach and Miss Edith Lombard, formerly of Boston, but now of Bar Harbor, Me., were on the Ivernia.

JUDGE FORCES HORSE TRADER TO REFUND $40

Aged Couple Who Dealt With Man Get Their Money Back.

Judge Reed in the Dorchester Municipal Court to-day compelled a horsetrader to refund $40, the purchase price of a horse which had been paid over to the trader by an eighty-year-old couple, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Meegan of No. 894 Broadway, South Boston. The trader, Arthur J. Berrigan of No. 238 Boston street, Dorchester, accepted $40 from the couple a week ago Saturday, and promised a bay horse which they selected.

After several days a gray horse was delivered. Meegan made a demand for either the horse he selected or his $40. But the gray horse was all that he could get. Then he sought the aid of the police, and Berrigan was arrested on a larceny warrant.

The horse dealer paid the Meegans back their money in court to-day, and then Judge Reed placed the case on file, but with a warning to horse traders who have of late been playing fast and loose with purchasers of horses in Dorchester.

EVELYN THAW STILL AT HOME

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—An emphatic denial is made at the home of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw that she intended to leave this city. Persistent rumors have been sent from many parts of the country saying Mrs. Thaw was spending the Summer there, or that she had taken quarters there and would leave New York. Nova Scotia and Pittsburg were both claiming her last night.

Anty Drudge Cures a Sick Headache.

Dr. Fudge—"Does Mrs. Junebride live here?"

Anty Drudge—"No—next door. I found her out in the back kitchen crying over her wash. The poor dear isn't used to such hard work, and she has a sick headache from it. I took the wash from her and quickly finished it with Fels-Naptha. She won't need you again on that score."

Dr. Fudge—"Well, really, Anty Drudge, washday is responsible for more ills than most people imagine. I am glad you have taken Mrs. Junebride under your wing. Fels-Naptha is the ounce of prevention that is worth my pound of cure."

Delicate summer curtains, draperies, tapestries, laces, women's fine raiment—things that would be ruined by washing in the old-fashioned way—can be cleaned at home with Fels-Naptha as well as an expert cleaner could do it.

Fels-Naptha contains no injurious chemicals; nothing that could harm the most delicate fabric. Sets colors instead of making them run as most soaps do.

With Fels-Naptha, use only cold or lukewarm water—never hot. That saves the fabric. Hot water would soften it and cause fraying.

Fels-Naptha dissolves the dirt; you don't have to rub it loose as with ordinary soap.

More than a million women do their washing with Fels-Naptha. They have found out that Fels-Naptha is the best and easiest way.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Six won and two lost is the record for the Pilgrims, who wind up their long series of engagements with the White Sox this afternoon.

The locals won one game in the Hub, and one here yesterday, and strange as it may seem, the two defeats recorded against the Boston outfit should have been the easiest victories. On both occasions the Hub pitchers suffered "brain storms" in the last two innings.

However, there's no kick coming from the Boston players, as even a record of six won and two lost against such a formidable aggregation as the Chicagos is one to be proud of. What other team in the country could pull off such a stunt?

"Cy" Morgan May Pitch.

Manager McGuire is going to work hard for the final contest, and will probably send "Cy" Morgan, who beat the Chicagos last Saturday in Boston, after the game.

George Winter, who, with Cy Young, is the chief victory-winner for the team, will probably be saved for the opening contest with the Browns to-morrow afternoon.

Manager McGuire was tickled to death when he heard that Young will rejoin the team at Detroit Monday. The series with this team will undoubtedly prove one of the biggest things of the season, and matters will certainly be safer for Boston with "Cy" on the job.

When the Chicagos went to bat in the eighth inning of yesterday's game the score was 5 to 1 against them, and it looked as though they were doomed to another defeat. But then came an avalanche of runs in this and the final inning, and when time was called, the Sox were one run to the good, 6 to 5.

Four runs were made by the visitors in the first three innings, and Altrock was relieved by Roy Patterson.

Chicagos Tallied in Fourth.

The Chicagos got a tally in the fourth, but the Pilgrims got another in the sixth.

In the eighth came the undoing of the Pilgrims. Hub Hart, the Boston boy, got a single. Hickman, the great pinch hitter, got a base on balls, and Quillin ran for him. Glaze gave Hahn three balls, and Manager McGuire yanked him out of the box, and put Pruitt in. He completed the passing of Hahn, filling the bases.

Jones and Isbell walked in order, and two runs were forced across the plate. Donahue rapped a grounder to Knight and Isbell was thrown out at second, Hahn scoring on the play. Jones was nipped at the plate on Davis's grounder. Congalton made a great catch of Dougherty's terrific drive.

In the ninth the Sox were still one shy. Tannehill was an easy out. Hub Hart walked, and McFarland, batting for White, singled. Rohe ran for him. Hahn made a dandy smash to right centre, and two runs crossed the pan, winning the game for the locals.

GANS WORKS HARD TO BE FIT FOR BURNS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15.—Away down deep in his heart Joe Gans may think that Jimmy Burns is a tapioca, but the fact that the champion is working like a Trojan seems to indicate that he is preparing for a tough customer Friday night.

And Burns is a tough customer, make no mistake about it. If Joe Gans is ever whipped he will be whipped by a man like Burns—not particularly clever, not a scientific boxer, but a knocker-out of the whirlwind type. No man can hope to outbox Gans. Some of us remember the fight between Gans and Mike "Twin" Sullivan. We remember how Mike Twin made Honey Mellody look like the veriest sucker at the game. Multiply that by two and you have the showing which Mike Twin put up against Gans. Mike tried to outbox the Baltimore Oriole and he was beaten to every punch. It will not be a clever man who whips Joe Gans—not until his stamina deserts him, at any rate. The man who whips the negro must whip him all in one round and with one punch. Gans's record shows that he can be knocked out. George McFadden handed it to him after twenty-three rounds of fighting, but that was eight years ago, and Gans has learned a great deal in eight years.

Fights Like Nelson.

Burns is a fighter of the Nelson type. Punishment does not seem to affect him as it affects other men. He can hit about five times harder than the great Dane ever could. Realizing that if he allows Gans to set himself and fight the battle to his own style he will not have a chance in a thousand to win, Burns will probably go at the champion the second the bell rings. A hard hitter may score a knockout in the first round just as easily as the last.

Nelson started after Gans at Goldfield, but he did not rush fast enough. That slow little bitch step of his carried him across the ring so slowly that Gans had plenty of time to set himself for his best punches, and his right crosses and left swings nearly took "Bat" off his feet. The man who intends to rush Joe Gans will have to step some, for the negro is very fast on his feet. There is nothing in his way of getting over the canvas that would remind one of Abe Attell. Gans never seems to be in a hurry, but he glides here and there without effort, making the other fellow miss by half inches and countering with lightning-like blows which are hard enough to jar a man from the soles of his feet upward.

Jimmy Burns knows that if he whips Gans it means a fortune for him. Of all the divisions the lightweight brigade is the one which gets the money. More money has been made by lightweight fighters in the past five years than in all the other weight divisions put together.

Should Burns Win.

Should Burns win over Gans he would be hailed as the greatest slugger of them all, and it means a man's size fortune to the Bohemian challenger. This fight will attract attention all over the world. Burns has been marked as a tough fellow of the improving kind. His fight with the Montana Kid, while it attracted little attention outside of Los Angeles, showed that Burns is beginning to use his head and show a little cleverness. Montana began to sidestep that right; Burns found the antidote with a left swing to the body, and whenever he saw Montana slide over to the left he caught him with a left smash.

Whether he can hit Gans with either hand remains to be seen. It is certain that Gans will hit him early and often, and if James can weather the first ten rounds without slackening his pace his chances will be improved 100 per cent.

The fight Friday may make ring history and give us a new lightweight champion. With Nelson out of the game there are three legitimate 133-pounds-a-tringside fighters left in the limelight—Gans, Britt and Burns. The latter is the dark horse and he has the punch which unmakes champions.

OARSMEN DON'T LIKE NEW N. A. A. O. RULE

The amendment to the constitution of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, passed at the annual convention in Philadelphia, to the effect that scullers or crews that compete in foreign countries without the indorsement of the N. A. A. O. are liable to suspension in future, has caused a lot of talk among rowing men. It is the opinion of many interested in sporting matters that this ruling was going too far. Said an ex-champion sweep man yesterday:

"It was one of the silliest pieces of legislation I ever read of in one way, while it has a tyrannical side, meaning that the ruling powers in the N. A. A. O. want to meddle with a man's private affairs by controlling his actions as an amateur and a sportsman. The only place an American might care to row abroad is at Henley, and some time ago the steward of that regatta passed a stringent resolution debarring American entries there, so what is the sense of the N. A. A. O. amendment keeping a man at home? It was explained that the clause was aimed at keeping inferior oarsmen at home and not bring American muscle into disrepute in the eyes of foreigners.

"If a man feels like going to England, Germany, France or elsewhere, and if he has the money to pay his way, he should be at liberty to take his boat along and row any old time he pleases. It should be the same for the man for whose expenses the hat was passed around. When you tell a man he must not row abroad because he is not a champion you are interfering with his rights as a man and his liberty as an American citizen.

"In all the years we have been at sweep rowing we have not been able to produce an eight that could cross to London and take the measure of such a club as the Leander. Yale, Cornell, Pennsylvania, the Vespers and Argonauts tried the feat and failed.

"As far as bringing American prowess into ridicule by allowing poor oarsmen to go across, I cannot see it. Our real merits in the line of competitive athletics are well known the world over. However, much different is the A. A. U. policy from the N. A. A. O. The A. A. U. gives certificate cards to all sorts of athletes to compete abroad. If they do not win, the failure by no means detracts from the reputation of track and field athletics in America."

The record of seven minutes twenty-five seconds for the senior eight race by the Argonauts over the mile and a half course on the Schuylkill put the record sharps on their mettle and brought to light the need of a record table by the N. A. A. O. It was said that though the Argonauts' figures were the best for a national event there was a better one for the course. Some years ago Cornell swept over the same strip of water in six minutes fifty-eight seconds, but from what could be gathered there is no comparison with the time made last Saturday. The Cornellians rowed while there was a freshet in the river and therefore had the aid of a whipping tide.

The Harlem Rowing Club is on the warpath again with a senior four shell for the Middle States regatta on Labor Day. The crew has put in a week's work already and shows a fine turn of speed. It is composed of H. Nonenbacker, stroke; John J. Ryan, No. 3; John O'Brien, No. 2, and J. D. V. Breen, bow.

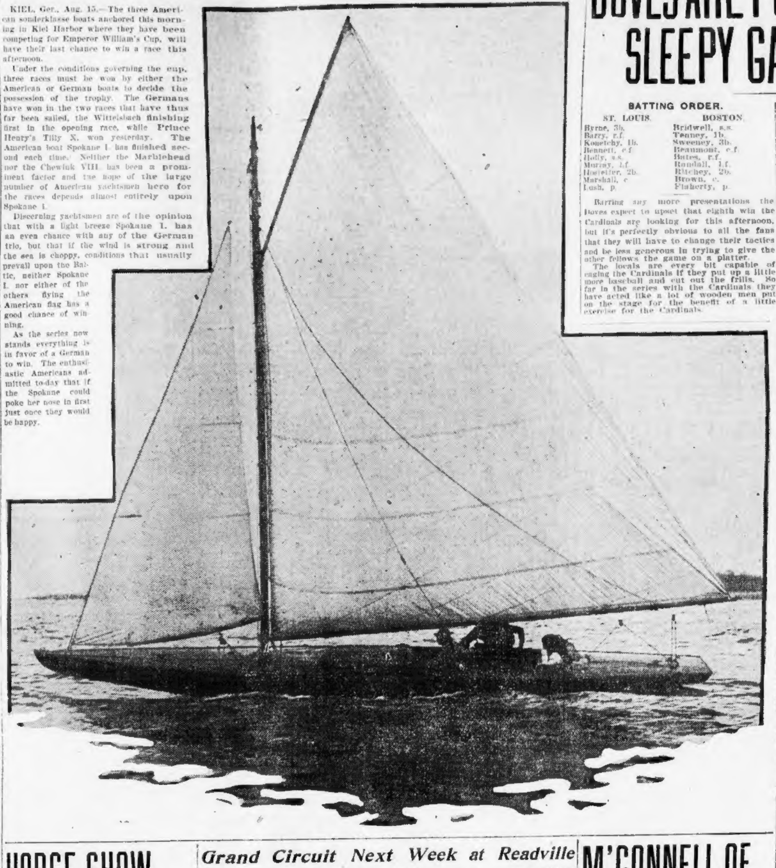
Spokane I. America's Only Hope at Kiel



KIEL, Ger., Aug. 15.—The three American sonderklasse boats anchored this morning in Kiel Harbor where they have been competing for Emperor William's Cup, will have their last chance to win a race this afternoon.

Under the conditions governing the cup, three races must be won by either the American or German boats to decide the possession of the trophy. The Germans have won in the two races that have thus far been sailed, the Wittelsbach finishing first in the opening race, while Prince Henry's Tilly X. won yesterday. The American boat Spokane I. has finished second each time. Neither the Marblehead nor the Chewink VIII. has been a prominent factor and the hope of the large number of American yachtsmen here for the races depends almost entirely upon Spokane I.

Discerning yachtsmen are of the opinion that with a light breeze Spokane I. has an even chance with any of the German trio, but that if the wind is strong and the sea is choppy, conditions that usually prevail upon the Baltic, neither Spokane I. nor either of the others flying the American flag has a good chance of winning.

As the series now stands everything is in favor of a German to win. The enthusiastic Americans admitted to-day that if the Spokane could poke her nose in first just once they would be happy.

Barring any more presentations the Doves expect to upset that eighth win the Cardinals are looking for this afternoon, but it's perfectly obvious to all the fans that they will have to change their tactics and be less generous in trying to give the other fellows the game on a platter.

The locals are every bit capable of caging the Cardinals if they put up a little more baseball and cut out the frills. So far in the series with the Cardinals they have acted like a lot of wooden men put on the stage for the benefit of a little exercise for the Cardinals.

The Doves are a well meaning bunch of ball tossers, but they don't seem able to wiggle out from a series of setbacks which has inflicted on the spirit. A win over the Cardinals at this point in the disaster would do more than anything in the tonic line.

Seven straight defeats from the tail-enders certainly looks bad and is enough to take the heart out of any team, and the longer it continues the worse off for the victims.

So long as McCloskey can win without forcing his star pitcher, Karger, he is likely to let him rest on the shelf and use Lush or his new one, Wolters, in the third game to-day. Pat Flaherty may be given a show to stop the Cardinals and Pat is the one best bet to make a strong effort to clean up the Westerners.

The Cardinals took the second game by the score of 6 to 3, and couldn't very well help accepting it as it was thrust upon them.

Stoney McGlynn, the long-winded twirler, was hit free enough, but the bateers didn't show any concerted action and let plenty of fine situations go by.

On the very first man up Sweeney threw wild, and that must have been the key for the result, as it woke the Cardinals up and they did all their hitting in the first two innings while Dorner was in the box and made enough runs to get the game then.

Linderman, who relieved Dorner, was good and bad in spots, and his teammates had no batting of the right kind on tap to help him along.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Something harrowing to look at. That game.

Umpire Johnstone failed to show up and Needham and Noonan took the job. Needham was out to give the close decisions to his team and Noonan did not have much chance to hold his end up on the bases.

Jesse Burkett of the Worcester team, with catcher Knotts, who is nursing a split hand, saw the game and, judging by their expressions, did not enjoy it.

The players ran the game to suit themselves, and as a result, it lasted till after 6 o'clock. With the regular umpire away there was no hurry in the action.

The fans will have to take their suppers along with them if the matinees continue to be prolonged.

It was not Gus Dorner's day, and after being bumped for five hits, three of them being doubles, he was allowed to escape and Linderman manned the box. The Cardinals only got one earned run off him in seven innings.

The Doves threw all the chances they had to the winds by doing some bungling work on the bases and failing to do a little handy sticking.

Though Stoney McGlynn was out-batted he was able to keep the hits scattered and let the Doves get themselves out on the bases.

HORSE SHOW AT COHASSET SEPT. 13-14

Fashion and horse will vie for laurels in the Cohasset Horse Show at Whitney's race track, September 13 and 14, and the proceeds will be devoted to the Bonnie Bairn fresh air fund.

Sixteen classes have been arranged by the committee, and include events for ponies, saddle horses, single hitches, pairs, high steppers, tandems, four-in-hands, hunters, jumpers and trotters. There will also be a race for trotters, mile heats, best two in three.

The committee having the affair in charge is Courtenay Crocker, chairman; A. S. Bigelow, S. S. Spaulding, Francis H. Burrage and Ralph B. Williams.

Entries to the horse show close September 2 with Francis H. Burrage, Cohasset.

JOHNSON MAY MEET BARRY

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Jack Robinson may be seen in the ring before he meets Sailor Burke at Bridgeport next month. Sam Fitzpatrick received a wire from the Reading Athletic Club, offering 70 per cent. of the gross receipts for a fight between Jack Johnson and Sailor Burke on August 27. A convention will be held there that week, and at least 10,000 visitors will be in town.

As Burke and Johnson are signed up for Bridgeport, Sam Fitzpatrick is trying to substitute Jim Barry in place of Burke, and if the club and Barry agree the fight will take place. Barry is ten pounds heavier than Burke and would give Johnson a hard rub for the money.

JOHNNY NELSON TO RIDE AGAIN

Little Johnny Nelson, the popular motor paced bike rider, who is now in New York, will shortly be seen at Revere in the dangerous game again.

Nelson a couple of years ago was one of the foremost riders in the country, when he forsook the track to go into automobile racing, and is now anxious to get back in the sport which he was most fitted for.

It was at the Charles River track that he made a world's record for fifteen miles, riding with Walthour, Moran and all the cracks of the game. He was only seventeen years old then and lacked the stamina to go great distances. Now he has nearly reached his majority and is stronger than ever.

Grand Circuit Next Week at Readville

FAST HORSES TO RACE

To pick the winners of the numerous classes at the Readville Grand Circuit meeting, which opens next Monday and lasts five days, would be a proposition far too strenuous for the most dyed-in-the-wool dopets to attempt, even one who has followed the horses through the circuit from Detroit.

While there was a big sifting out of the trotters and pacers when the final payment was made in the stake events, yet that did not decrease in any degree the high quality of those who will take the word; in fact, it is likely that with the fields smaller the time made will not only be considerably faster in each of the big races, but the battle for supremacy will be waxed in doubt till the last heat has been fought to a finish.

Five Races First Day.

Secretary Jewett has announced five races for Monday—a very long programme. In the pacing futurity not much is known of the colts outside of Kavallo and Shakespeare, both of whom have worked miles in 2:10.

In the two-year-old futurity, the local youngsters scheduled to face the starter are The Leading Lady, Adula, Aquil, Binvolo, Nella, Selma, Silver Baron, Sunny Way, and a filly by Alliewood. It is known that several of the number are capable of racing quite a little better than 2:20.

Provided that Sonoma Girl is kept out of the Blue Hill stake for the Massachusetts, the most promising one in the event seems to be Beatrice Bellini, in Johnny Dickerson's stable. She has been a most consistent winner all along the line, racing in 2:10 being apparent play for her.

The Friend Looks Good.

Only half a dozen pacers are eligible to start in either the 2:10 or the Neponset pacing classes. Any one is liable to gain the major portion of the purse in the former race, while for the $3,000 stake The Friend, owned by the Boston horseman, Eddie Rice, appears the candy.

Tuesday the free-for-all pace will see Baron Grattan, Angus Pointer, Ecstatic, Audubon Boy, Argot Boy and possibly a couple more lock horns. Audubon Boy is the only one of the party that has a record better than two minutes, but it has to be figured that it is his first race of the season. In any case the fur is bound to fly, and a mile right close to two minutes may be expected.

The three-year-old trotting futurity has excited interest all over the country. Bell Bird is the favorite, but when she meets Blue Hill, Aquin, Bonnie Way, Bica, etc., she will know that she has been to the races for fair. Critics are thinking there will be one of the heats in 2:10, at least.

Sonoma Girl and Highball.

Wednesday the Massachusetts will pack the grounds to its capacity, and all it needs is for Sonoma Girl and Highball to start for the race to be the fastest in the history of the stake. It is too bad that Watson, who defeated Sonoma Girl at Poughkeepsie, is not entered, too.

Alice Pointer, Reproachless, William O. and Thornway are a few elected to fight for honors and money in the Readville stake for pacers.

Thursday the feature event is the Norfolk for pacers, valued at $6,000. John A. Kruger, Aileen Wilson and Wilson Addington are only a few noted sidewheelers entered. In the Ponkapoag $4,500 stake for trotters Betty Brook, Budd, Bi-Flora, Early Alice, Watson and Lady Resolute come together, with Watson the favorite.

Friday comes the 2:05 trot, and with Lilian R., Ora, Turley, etc., entered, the fur is bound to fly. In the 2:04 pace Geer's pacer, Ardelle, will strike Phalla, Nervolo, Cascade, Texas Rooker and Judge Wilson. By no means is the best racing to be only in the stake and fast classes mentioned, as in the larger fields are to start the largest field of horses.

SALLY VIII. WINS ANOTHER RACE

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 15.—For the second time in three races, the Sally VIII., the Quincy Cup defender of the Corinthian Yacht Club, defeated the challenger, the Manchester II., yesterday, this time by three minutes nine seconds, over the ten-mile course.

M'CONNELL OF GRAYS TO JOIN THE PILGRIMS

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 15.—At the end of the Eastern League season, Ambrose McConnell, the clever second-baseman of the Grays, who is batting for .322 and fielding at second base for .937, will join the Pilgrims. He comes from Utica of the New York State League, having been bought from Al Buckenberger of Rochester for $500.

SOMERS WON'T SELL HIS STOCK

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Charley Somers, of the Cleveland club, is not anxious to sell his stock and give up the presidency of the team, as reported. He was disgusted with the way things were going two weeks ago, but he again sees hope of his men winning the American League pennant, now that they have braced.

SHOULD GIRL SEEK ONE WHO DESERTED HER?

Boston American Readers Tell This Poor Wanderer What to Do.

SEND IN YOUR OPINIONS

A stranger in a strange land, deserted by her fiance, to see whom she had travelled thousands of miles only to be left alone in the detention pen to fight her world's battles as best she could, is the sad story of Florence Evans.

She has been advised not to seek her tardy suitor by a clergyman, but she does not know what to do. Can you help this poor girl out? What would you do in a case like that?

Several readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN have sent in suggestions, and you may have some advice to give this poor little wanderer.

Write a short letter and tell her what you would do.

Address your letter at once to the Problem Editor, Boston American.

A few of yesterday's letters follow:

Actress Gives Advice.

My Dear Miss Evans—Although appearances lead to a supposition that your future is a hard one, such is not the case. Had you married this man you would have been in a worse predicament. You have escaped much, my dear girl, and were I in your place I would ask God to guide me. I would feel I owe it to Him, and would seek a position where there are little children, that their bright dispositions would heal up your wound and in time you will again be happy. It depends on you; remember when God made the beautiful green grass He made enough for all. So, dear girl, take the good that He has provided for you. Ever have the word and thought of "success" in your mind, and with His watchfulness you will win everything. Trust few, as few can be trusted.

A THOUGHTFUL "ACTRESS."

Says Clergyman Right.

Miss Florence Evans—I read in the BOSTON AMERICAN about you, and I think the clergyman is right; that you should not go to your fiance when he don't have more love for you. Please write me if I can do anything for you. I will be glad to do so.

S. WILSON.

Warren, R. I.

Wants to Meet Girl.

Miss Florence Evans—I saw your letter in the BOSTON AMERICAN last night and thought I would write to you. I would like to meet you in Boston. I am a young man of good habits, and you will find this out after meeting me. I feel bad for you, but I am sure you will again be happy. Please let me know where I can meet you and have a talk with you. You need not be afraid. You will find me a gentleman and one who means all that he says. You will find a true friend in me.

NIGHT POSTMEN FOR NEW YORK

He's here at last—the night mail carrier. New York, the home of the all-night bank, the moonlight police court and all of the other attachments of an up-and-coming civilization, is going to have this newest of Uncle Sam's aids to business. Postmaster-General George von L. Meyer of Boston is responsible for it.

The extra delivery in New York will be held at 8 o'clock each night, and will help Boston business men who want to be sure to get their mail into the hands of their New York interests promptly. Boston isn't going to have the fly-by-night postman yet. Mayor Fitzgerald has promised to make a speech on the matter soon.

JOY IN JAIL, BARBER GETS 30-DAY STAY

William Colbert Sentenced for Mat Theft and Happiness Reigns at Charles Street.

NONE TO GO UNSHAVEN

Well, the Charles Street Jail won't have to go without its barber, after all.

William Colbert, who for several days has been administering the soothing shave and the improving haircut to the 230 prisoner in the jail, has just been sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment in the same building with the barbershop.

He was found guilty in the Municipal Criminal Court of having stolen a door mat from the doorstep of Mrs. Cornelia Partridge at No. 101 Newbury street.

Taken to the Charles Street Jail to await trial, he found himself in a very forest of unshaved chins and uncut polls.

Right on the Job.

Leaping into the breach with his trusty little razor and his snippy shears, William Colbert barbered as many of the 230 as he could reach.

It was manifestly impossible that any of the crew should appear in any courtroom looking as if all the barbers had gone on a sympathetic strike with the telegraphers. But it was also manifestly impossible to postpone Coldbert's trial forever.

No other barber became entangled in the coils of the law and it really did begin to look as if Colbert had barbered himself into a fairly long engagement.

Joy Reigns at Jail.

He went up before Judge Bolster to receive his sentence and Sheriff Seavey and the other attaches stood trembling in the fear that he might be sent away from the jail barber shop.

But no.

Judge Bolster sent the barber back to the jail for a month, and joy reigns at the Charles street establishment.

Again the cheery cry of "Next" rings through the institution, and again the gentlemen therein submit their chins to the flashing blade.

P. S.—Who ever heard of a barber with whom tips were so infrequent that he was forced to give his attention to door mats?

Dancing on the Public Stomach

It's Amusing for Strikers and Corporations—A Little Hard on the Public.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

The telegraph strike illustrates the stupidity of our present system of industrial monopoly.

In the management of telegraphs there are three parties interested. First the people — EIGHTY MILLIONS OF THEM.

Second, telegraph operators, MANY THOUSANDS OF THEM.

Third, owners of the telegraph companies, THE INDUSTRIOUS ISSUERS OF WATERED STOCK ON WHICH THE PUBLIC MUST PAY.

Three sets of people are interested in this strike. There are eighty millions included in one class, and those eighty millions are absolutely ignored in every fight and in every question.

The people must OWN their telegraph system.

Here are facts in connection with this strike, which inconveniences every business man, interferes with the lives of millions, and jeopardizes the earning of a living by thousands:

To begin with, there are issued TENS OF MILLIONS OF WATERED TELEGRAPH STOCK; tens of millions of paper representing nothing but avarice.

If the Western Union Company were not compelling the public to pay interest on tens of millions of watered stock, it could afford to pay its people well, give good service, refrain from robbing the public, discontinue even its relations with public gamblers, and still make plenty of money.

The trouble with the telegraph business, as with all other great American monopolies, is primarily due to the fact that the financial scoundrels behind these big enterprises are determined that the people shall not only pay for what they get, but pay interest on untold millions of watered stock besides.

First-class men in the employ of the telegraph companies are poorly paid. When a man has devoted his life to perfecting himself as a telegraph operator, the best that he can look forward to in the employ of the big company is, as a maximum, $21.85 a week for six days of nine hours each. As a rule, a very successful and experienced operator cannot hope for better than $19.50 a week.

There are employed in Boston a hundred operators paid only from seven to twelve dollars and a half per week in branch offices. These are the young operators. The company gives its employes no vacation. Old age automatically deprives them of their work. Their prospects are not cheerful.

It may be worth while to mention the conditions under which THIS NEWSPAPER EMPLOYS TELEGRAPH OPERATORS.

We hire our own men, to work on our own wires. We pay these men when they work at night $35.00 weekly for six nights of eight hours. When they work in the daytime, we pay them $30.00 weekly for six days of eight hours. THIS IS THE MINIMUM. Some of our operators are paid more than that.

For extra time we pay seventy cents an hour at night and sixty cents in the day. Every man has a vacation of two weeks on full pay each year.

If this newspaper can afford to pay good men fairly, certainly the great companies and the owners of exaggerated capitalism might pay moderately well.

The Western Union has emphasized the fact that it added ten per cent. to the pay of its operators not long ago. It does not emphasize so much the fact that it added to the amounts charged to the public between very important points an average increase of about twenty-five per cent.

Inasmuch as the amount paid to operators is a relatively small percentage of the amount received by the company, it is a little ridiculous to increase the operators' pay ten per cent. and charge the public an increase of twenty-five per cent. on gross receipts. A reversal of that would have been nearer to justice.

The demands of the men are as follows:

An increase in pay of fifteen per cent. This would not bring the wages of the highest grade operators up to five dollars per day.

Equal pay for equal work by women. At present women are paid less than men, even when they do work as hard and as good. The effort to put them on an equal footing with the men is most commendable. If this strike should result in fairer treatment of women, that would reconcile the public much to inconvenience.

The operators demand also that the company shall supply them with the typewriting machines on which to write their messages. Speed and the interest of the company compel the men to use typewriters. It is preposterous to make men on small pay buy and maintain expensive machines —as well compel the locomotive engineer to supply his locomotive.

This newspaper supplies its operators with the typewriting machines at OUR cost. (These and other facts we mention by way of showing that we practice what we preach.)

The men demand recognition of their union, but they do NOT demand the closed shop. That is to say, they do not seek to compel any operator to join the union against his will, nor do they demand that the companies shall refrain from employing non-union operators.

We do not believe that the demands of the men are unreasonable. We know that with the water out of its stock the Western Union could grant the demands, give better service and pay far higher dividends than at present. The question is:

Which is more important—well-paid men with money to spend, able to support their families decently, or dividends on watered stock issued fraudulently and unloaded on innocent investors?

As a matter of fact, telegraph lines and the telephone lines in addition to the postoffice should be owned by the people and managed for the people.

There should be in every town and village and city a combination postoffice, telegraph office and telephone office. Employes should be well paid, they should have old age pensions, they should be protected in their work, AND COMPELLED TO DO GOOD WORK.

The present system of employes and monopoly owners dancing up and down on the public stomach, fighting out their strikes with all their blows landing on the public pate, is ridiculous, preposterous and unbearable.

The people are fools, but they ought to get tired after a while of a system that never considers their rights under any possible circumstances.

The strike to-day is of course the only weapon of the employe. He must strike or endure conditions that are dictated solely by selfish personal interests. None the less, the strike is a barbaric, out-of-date thing. Men should have brains enough to vote for their rights together, INSTEAD OF STRIKING SEPARATELY, making their families suffer and losing more than half the time.

In this strike the operators have a hard up-hill fight, and they know it.

The telegraph companies very cunningly, with considerable pretence of philanthropy, are constantly educating telegraph operators free of charge. They maintain free schools in which anybody can learn to be an operator, AND OF COURSE THEY DO THIS THAT THEY MAY HAVE A PLENTIFUL SUPPLY OF NON-UNION LABOR IN CASE OF STRIKES.

In addition, they encourage a great many young people to hope for good positions that they cannot get. They produce an oversupply of very inferior operators; they take young men and young women away from fields in which they could find occupation and try to keep them on hand as possible strike-breakers—a selfish and wasteful course.

Over in Europe there is a peace congress where a lot of wise men are talking about ending or avoiding the wars between nations that break out rarely. It is about time for a peace congress at home, to avoid the strike wars, the foolish fights in industry that lead to nothing, that unsettle business, interfere with men earning a living, inconvenience the entire public—AND THEN IN A SHORT TIME BEGIN ALL OVER AGAIN.

The worst of it is, that on both sides the men fight blindly, ignorant of each other's characters. Both sides believe that they are doing right. The workers feel that they are not fairly treated, that promises made to them are not kept.

The head officials of the big corporations do not own them. They sincerely believe that they are working honestly on behalf of those whom they represent. And they are full of complaint against operators on the ground THAT THEY DO NOT LIVE UP TO THEIR BARGAIN.

The operators are accused of making promises and breaking them. But this newspaper, which has an agreement with its operators, pays them fairly, and has their promise to continue work, has no complaint to make of the men's unwillingness to keep an agreement.

The fact is that a few big men who issued the watered stock MILK the national monopolies. They take out tens of millions for their private purse. Then they sell the watered stock to investors. And these innocent investors and the employes are put in the position of fighting each other after the milk has been taken out of the cocoanut by the big rascals that do the watering of the stocks.

When will the people of the United States have brains enough to stop these stupid fights, interfering with the public comfort and public prosperity?

WHEN WILL THEY HAVE THE BRAINS TO OWN THEIR MONOPOLIES? THIS STRIKE OUGHT TO TEACH THEM TO BEGIN THE WORK BY TAKING OVER THE TELEGRAPH LINES, TO BE RUN IN CONNECTION WITH THE POSTOFFICE, AT ONCE.

IF MORAN SEEKS RE-ELECTION

He Should Engage Doyle to Attack Him Often.

There is an old rhyme about rogues:

> No man e'er felt the halter draw
> With good opinion of the law.

This is called to mind by the wordy assault made upon the District Attorney by one James H. Doyle, who is under indictment for attempted bribery.

This man Doyle, it should be known, is Mayor Fitzgerald's chief assistant in the enterprise of taking money from the taxpayers and placing it in the pockets of grafting contractors and members of the Fitzgerald family.

Doyle was engaged in that undertaking when, according to the indictment filed yesterday, he violated the law against corrupt practices in office.

Doyle's effrontery is characteristic of the present corrupt city administration. When caught in the act of bartering for the votes of City Councilmen, he insults the Grand Jury that indicted him and shrieks out his rage at the District Attorney.

His sneering insinuation that the Grand Jury "played Moran's political game for him" and his allegation that it was "bullied and bulldozed" by the District Attorney, is an attack upon one of our most sacred institutions and upon a body of men who are entitled to the profound respect of the public and to the cordial support of the judges under whose guidance they act.

If Doyle is telling the TRUTH, he reveals a knowledge of actions inside the Grand Jury room which no man, least of all one under investigation by that body, can legitimately possess.

He gives ground for credence to the common report of an underground connection between the Grand Jury room and City Hall.

If he is NOT telling the truth he should be punished for contempt of court.

Keep the Faith of Your Children

By Winifred Black

WHAT a fool, what a blind, stupid fool a woman is who doesn't keep her children believing in her!

Why, I'd rather see the faith and trust in one little, round face that I know than to be called the most beautiful and the most youthful looking woman in all the world.

No woman can make a friend that can be to her what a child of her own can hardly help being, if she's only half a woman.

Why, see what they go through together, the mother and the boy who looks up at her with such faith and admiration. They face illness and disappointment and disillusion together—the mother and the little boy—and every illness, and every disappointment, and every disillusion, instead of separating them, is just one thread more in the splendid chain that binds them so close that no human hands can ever separate them.

A woman who is ashamed of her children or bothered with them—a woman who finds her boy a bore and her little girls a nuisance—is a poor, heartless, mindless creature, who doesn't even know the first conjugation of the verb "to live."

What would you think of a man who grew so tired of the responsibility of walking that he had his feet cut off so that he could sit in an invalid's chair and be rolled around the world the rest of his life? What would you think of a woman who put out her own eyes to get rid of the bother of reading?

You'd shut such people as that up in an asylum for the feeble-minded, wouldn't you?

Well, that's what ought to be done to a woman who is silly enough to be ashamed of her own children.
